Marshall Urges Prompt Pact Approval

Uphill Fight Opens Today For Repeal Of T-H Law

Drive by Democrats To Get Compromise Scheduled in Senate, Thomas Kicking Off

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Still reaching for a labor bill compromise which the President will sign, Administration forces today will open an uphill fight in the Senate to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act "with amendments."

The amendments, whether they cut back the act to a shadow, or as is more likely, retain a large portion of the measure, may keep the Senate busy for the rest of this month.

Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), Senate Labor Chairman, will kick off for the Administration with a detailed explanation of the committee-reported Thomas bill, restoring the Wagner Act "with improvements."

Whether Thomas will stand on his bill "as is" or call another huddle of his committee to bring out more amendments, may depend on another round of party conferences before and after today's session.

'Bi-Partisan' Amendments

What projected the compromise search were five "bi-partisan" amendments drawn by four members of the Labor Committee and unveiled before a Democratic caucus Friday.

Two Democratic members of Thomas' group, Hill (Ala.) and Douglas (Ill.), joined by two Republican members, Aiken (Vt.) and Morse (Oreg.), started the compromise ball rolling.

Thomas is expected to meet with Douglas, Hill and other Democratic members of his group in a further effort to reach a "meeting of minds." If he succeeds, the committee may later bring out its own compromise version.

So inconclusive was Friday's caucus that the quest for a concrete settlement, enabling the Administration to avoid another licking like it got in the House, may take the better part of this week.

May Be Laid Aside

While all the conferring is going on, the Senate may even temporarily lay aside the labor bill. Awaiting the first lull in the labor debate is the State-Justice-Commerce appropriation bill, the only money bill the Senate Appropriations Committee has succeeded in cutting below House levels.

This may be called up late today or Tuesday, while the Democrats have another palaver.

Here are the five compromise points causing all the talk: (1) Presidential power to seize struck plants, with the implied right to enjoin if the strike then continues; (2) guarantees of free speech to both employers and employes; (3) non-Communist affidavits signed by union officers and employers; (4) obligation on labor as well as management to bargain in good faith; and (5) requirement

3 More of 14 W. Va. Fugitives Caught; Only 3 Still Out

Moundsville, W. Va., June 5 (AP).—A widespread police blockade today netted three more of the 14 desperate long-term criminals who sawed their way out of the Moundsville State prison. Only three remained at large.

Members of a Brilliant, Ohio, posse shot Otto Neff, 38-year-old kidnaper, through the shoulder and jaw. The others fled but surrendered later. They were Stanley Sheptic, 33, and John Valykeo, 36, both habitual criminals and believed leaders in the prison break.

D. C. Officer Is Found Slain on Pacific Isle

ROGER G. DEVAN
. . Stabbed to death

Coast Guard Lieut. (j.g.) Roger Gilbert Devan, 23-year-old Washingtonian, was found stabbed to death in his bunk early Saturday on lonely Bikati Island in the Gilbert group.

The Coast Guard headquarters in Honolulu announced yesterday that his death came at the hands of an enlisted man, whose name was not disclosed.

Investigating officers were to return the accused man to Kwajalein pending decision on jurisdiction, the Associated Press reported. Bikati is British territory.

Lieutenant Devan, who commanded a 15-man Loran (long range navigation) station on the island, was the son of Dr. and Mrs. S. Arthur Devan, 3020 43d st. nw. He was graduated from the Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn., in June, 1946.

The Associated Press reported Devan was found Saturday morning in his bed, stabbed over the heart with a kitchen knife.

Lieut. James W. Coste and Lieut. (j.g.) Dudley Goodwin, commander and executive officer of the Coast Guard cutter Nettle, flew from Kwajalein, 800 miles northwest, to investigate.

A Coast Guard officer said the American lease agreement with the British had nothing in it covering such a case. It was not known whether a Coast Guard court-martial or a British court at nearby Tarawa would assume jurisdiction.

4 Crewmen Taken Off Eisler Ship

3 Had Dealings With Communist After Discovery As a Stowaway

New York, June 5 (AP).—Immigration officials said today four crew members of the Gerhart Eisler escape ship, the Batory, had been removed from the heavily guarded Polish vessel.

The crew members were identified by an officer of the ship as the Batory's chief steward, an assistant steward and two assistant pursers. One of the four was said to be a Danish citizen.

The captain of the Batory, Jan Cwiklinski, also left the ship tonight, accompanied by two immigration inspectors

They went to the Immigration offices where the four crewmen had been taken.

"I will not be too long, and hope to return with them," Capt. Cwiklinski said, referring to the four men.

The first three removed were identified as Chief Steward Marcel Czailski and Jan Piasecki and Paul Tibaek, both assistant pursers.

Tibaek was said to be a Danish citizen. The fourth man, removed some time later, was not identified immediately.

The ship's chief engineer said Czailski had registered Eisler aboard the vessel as a stowaway. Piasecki had sold him a ticket, and Tibaek arranged for his cabin.

The men were taken off the ship after squads of immigration agents had spent the day questioning the 351 members of the Batory crew.

The crew—including the captain and all officers—had been ordered to remain aboard throughout their stay in American waters.

(United Press reported an immigration official announced the Batory would sail on schedule at noon Monday, and that the four crewmen and the captain would be returned to their ship tonight and allowed to go with the ship.)

Eisler, German-born Communist twice convicted in U. S. Federal Courts and free under bail, stowed away on the Batory when it last sailed from here May 6.

Removal of the first three crewmen led to a call from the ship for the Polish consul general. He arrived more than an hour later. Afterward the fourth crewman was removed.

Last night 111 passengers from the Batory, many listed as of "doubtful American citizenship," were taken to Ellis Island for hearings.

In Washington, Danish Ambassador Henrik Kauffman appealed to the U. S. State Department to let 30 Danes in the crew off the ship.

It is the centenary of the Danish constitution, he said, and they wanted to help celebrate it.

In lieu of shore leave, Batory crewmen danced and sang on an upper deck, to the accompaniment of an improvised band.

General Marshall Honored at Dinner . . .

Truman, Mission Chiefs From 16 Nations Commend His Leadership

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Gen. George C. Marshall last night called for prompt ratification of the North Atlantic Pact as "very important to the world."

At a dinner in his honor on the second anniversary of his Harvard speech which proposed economic cooperation among Western nations, the former Secretary of State said:

"I feel that the prompt ratification of that Pact is very important to the world, as is a continued and increasing cooperation on the part of all our countries in everything that Pact involves, as well as in the original Recovery Program."

Chief among the many notables assembled at the Carlton Hotel to honor the author of the Marshall Plan was President Truman. The dinner was given by chiefs of mission here of the 16 countries of western Europe cooperating under the plan of self-help proposed by General Marshall while Secretary of State.

Praised by Truman

"The nations represented here," said Mr. Truman, "owe as much to General Marshall, in war and in peace, as they owe to any man in the world."

Then he pledged that, in the spirit of "this great American," the United States would continue dedicating itself to building a world "peaceful and prosperous."

While Marshall "shaped the victory of the Allies in the recent war to an extent that may not yet be fully realized," the President said, an even greater contribution followed the war. He declared:

"As Secretary of State in a critical period, he rose to new heights of leadership and achievement. He had been the master strategist of the war; now he rallied the democratic forces for peace.

"He found the free nations near despair and uncertain of their course.

Restored Confidence

"He restored their confidence.

"He revived their belief in the strength and the ultimate triumph of the cause of freedom and democracy.

"When our times are reviewed in the long perspective of history, I think General Marshall will be more widely remembered for the peacetime effort which bears his name than for his services of the war years, important though they were."

The President predicted that the Marshall Plan would come to be known as the dividing line between the old era of national suspicion, economic hostility, isolationism, and the new era of mutual cooperation to increase the pros-

Auto Racer Killed Before 2000 at Hybla

Nearly 2000 auto racing fans at the Hybia Valley Speedway were stunned into horrified silence yesterday as a red and white roadster racer careened wildly over another racer, then bounced end over end, killing its driver and injuring another.

The victim was Ronnie Cash, 31, a mechanic for Moore-Day Motors, Inc., Washington, who raced as a hobby. He died en route to Alexandria Hospital from skull fracture and loss of blood.

Cash's wife, Helen, and his 10-year-old daughter, Geraldine, were watching from the stands when the speeding racer climbed into the air over the other car and bounced back to the dirt track during the eight-lap semi-final in the Sunday competition.

The injured man is Doug Bailey, 29, Winchester, Va., driver of the second racer. He was taken to Alexandria Hospital with fractured ribs and arm cuts.

Cash's death was the first fatality on the Hybla Valley track, which is off Route 1, south of Alexandria.

William Zimmerman, Lanham Park, Md., an eyewitness, said Cash's vehicle, rounding the second turn of the track, struck Bailey's, which had swung to the outside lane to avoid a racer spinning in the center of the track.

As the starter waved the remaining racers to a halt at the final turn, members of the Penn Daw Rescue Squad rushed to Cash's car. Zimmerman said Cash was hunched over the steering wheel. The front and back ends of his racer were crushed like an accordion.

Six members of the rescue squad were needed to pull back the cockpit and release him. One of the rescuers who helped lift him into the ambulance said he was very badly battered. He was said to have numerous severe lacerations

Lack of Orders Blamed in Closing Of Blast Furnace

Pittsburgh, June 4 (AP).—Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., a subsidiary of United States Steel Corp., yesterday shut down a blast furnace at its Duquesne Works because of lack of orders.

The shutdown was the first by the company since the end of World War II. As a result, steel production capacity in the Pittsburgh district is expected to drop about 2 per cent this week.

The company said the blast furnace is being taken out of production because of lack of orders for both steel and iron.

Washington B&O Train Derailed at Baltimore

Baltimore, June 5 (AP). — The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's Washington-Philadelphia Express was derailed here tonight at an overpass in the northeast section.

A spokesman for the railroad said none of the 92 passengers was injured. They boarded another train which completed the run.

Enos R. Gosnell, engineer, said he thought the engine struck a spike on the track, causing it and six of the eight cars to run off.

Baseball Czar Cancels Ban On 'Jumpers'

Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler last night suddenly ended the five-year ban on 23 players who jumped to the Mexican League in 1946, and welcomed them back to organized baseball.

Included in Chandler's grant of amnesty to contract violators are Outfielder Danny Gardella of the New York Giants, and Pitchers Max Lanier and Fred Martin of the St. Louis Cardinals.

That trio now has pending in New York courts damage suits totalling $2,800,000 against Chandler, the two major league presidents and the club owners, charging baseball with being a monopoly in violation of the anti-trust laws.

Chandler will send out notices today to all the players, inviting them to apply for reinstatement. He declared the application will be tantamount to acceptance and that all clubs would rehire any players who seek reinstatement.

The commissioner made clear that he was not acting under any fear that baseball would lose its case in the courts. He pointed out that New York courts recently denied the plea of Gardella, Lanier and Martin for immediate reinstatement pending a verdict on their suits.

The ban is being lifted at this time, Chandler's statement said, "because it seems the fair thing to do

In the midst of his press conference, Chandler talked by telephone to Mickey Owen, former

Reorganize Military, Says Hoover

By the United Press

Former President Herbert C. Hoover said yesterday the military services must be reorganized to give the Secretary of Defense more authority "if we are to have proper preparedness."

He said such a reorganization also probably would "produce the largest single savings" of any of the many Federal reforms proposed by his Government study commission.

Hoover made the statement during a "Capital Memo" radio interview with Paul Martin of the Washington Bureau of the Gannett Newspapers.

"Reorganization of the military services is the greatest single problem with which the commission had to deal," the former President said. "It will produce probably the largest single saving of the measures we have proposed. It certainly will improve the defense of the United States."

He also said:

1. He is alarmed over what is a trend toward socialization of the electric power industry in the United States. He said the Government should let private companies distribute Federal power and not try to compete with them.

2. Not all business enterprises conducted by the Government invade the field of private industry. He cited as examples veterans insurance and "certain types of loans" for housing.

3. The practice of appointing

Acheson Attempts to Break Parley Deadlock on Berlin

By Wes Gallagher

Paris, June 5 (AP).—U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson has made a personal attempt to break the foreign ministers deadlock on Berlin, reliable informants disclosed today.

These sources said Acheson made it clear last night at a private dinner with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky just how far the Unted States is prepared to go in making concessions at this conference.

The gist of his outline was said to stress that the Western Powers are standing firm on their main proposition on Berlin and Germany, and if the Soviet Union has any new proposals it had better put them forward now if the conference is to steer clear of failure.

British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman were kept informed of Acheson's talk with Vishinsky.

The informants said the third secret session was called for Monday mainly to give Vishinsky an opportunity to contact Moscow after the dinner and come up with any compromises if the Kremlin is in a compromising mood.

Red Quits Party, But Not Faith, to Sign T-H Affidavit

New York, June 5 (NYHT).—Max Perlow, secretary-treasurer of the CIO United Furniture Workers of America, today announced he has resigned from the Communist Party to become eligible to sign a non-Communist affidavit under the Taft-Hartley Law.

Perlow made it clear this does not mean he is giving up his old beliefs.

He will file the affidavit, he said, to permit the union to qualify under the law and seek aid from the Labor Relations Board.

The Taft-Hartley law calls for officers of national or international unions to file affidavits, but does not specify personal rejection of Communist ideas.

Perlow denied the Communist Party "advocated the overthrow of the Government by force and violence," and said he supported no organization "that believes in, or teaches, the overthrow of our Government by force or violence."

U. S., Canada Ease Curbs On Air Routes

By The Associated Press

The United States and Canada announced yesterday a new air agreement under which each gets additional rights to do business in the other's country.

The agreement was signed Saturday at Ottawa and became effective immediately for an indeterminate period. It replaced one signed in February, 1945.

The agreement drew immediate, heated criticism from Sigmund Janas, president of Colonial Airlines. He called it "substantially a complete sellout of the Americans" and a "shocking" development in aviation diplomacy. He said the stockholders in his company may be deprived of their investment "in one stroke."

A major step in the new pact is acceptance by Canada of the so-called Bermuda-type agreement under which traffic operations are liberalized. Canada had insisted in previous contracts that only one airline be permitted to operate between any pair of cities across the border. That theory was abandoned.

These new air routes were granted to the United States:

1. Traffic rights at Gander Airport in Newfoundland on the route to Europe. This permits an airline to pick up and discharge

Two Freighters Crash in Fog Off Delaware

Lewes, Del., June 5 (AP).—The Greek freighter, Hellenic Beach, and the 7600-ton cargo ship Exmouth collided today in a dense fog off the Delaware coast, with a gaping hole ripped in the side of the Exmouth.

Two crewmen aboard the Exmouth were injured.

The Hellenic Beach vanished into the predawn mist after the crash and wasn't identified until 13 hours after the collision. It is owned by Hellenic Lines, Ltd., with offices in New York City.

The Hellenic Beach docked at a Brooklyn shipyard late today. Officials refused to discuss the extent of damage.

An SOS for Coast Guard assistance was sent out by the Exmouth's skipper after the crash at 1 a. m. (EST) at the mouth of Delaware Bay.

D. C. Boat Hits And Kills Youth

An 18-year-old Chrisfield, Md., youth was killed yesterday in a boat collision, involving a Washington merchant's racing boat, on Rock Creek at Bar Harbor Beach, Md.

The youth was identified as Louis E. Watson, jr., who with Harry Bowan, 22, also of Chrisfield, was in a rowboat.

Police said the racing boat was operated by Thomas T. Keane, 48, of 2917 Glover dr. nw., Washington, who was testing the boat for a qualifying heat for the Maryland Yacht Club's June regatta. Keane was released in $1000 bond for a hearing July 7.

Snead's 131 Wins Celebrities

By Shirley Povich

Slamming Sammy Snead plucked one more diadem for his golfing crown and Bob Hope, too, found new fame yesterday—in the National Celebrities Golf Tournament.

Taking with them a gallery of more than 5000 of the 9500 celebrity-stalking fans at the Army-Navy Country Club, Golfer Snead won the tournament's grand prize and Comic Hope topped all the amateurs.

Snead tacked a snazzy 66 to his record round of 65 in the first day's play to beat George Fazio's second place card of 134 by three strokes in the pros' division.

Hope, a long-shot in the amateur division, mixed comedy and good golf to whip around the course in 74 for a two-day total of 143, and beat out Bing Crosby for top honors by two strokes.

The tournament also produced a new women's champion—smart-hitting Grace Lenzcyk of Hartford, Conn., who had 74, 74—148, for a two-stroke bulge over Peggy Kirk at the finish.

Sponsored by The Washington Post in cooperation with Attorney General Tom Clark, the tournament produced a new high in Washington golf galleries as the Nation's headline figures of the entertainment world, sports, and official Washington teed off.

Two hours before noon, the crowd started to assemble, armed with cameras and autograph books to await the procession of the Nation's headline names.

The turnout found 400 men of the service forces hard put to contain the gallery behind ropes as Hollywood, New York, the high military, the sports world and the Federal Government put its nota-

3 Strikes Unsettled

District Dairies and Drivers In Around-Clock Pay Talks

While efforts to solve three Washington strikes were still fruitless last night, around-the-clock talks were reported launched for a quick solution to wage differences between District dairies and their drivers.

AFL carpenters who walked out five days ago against the Master Builders Association and the Concrete Contractors Council stood firm on demands for a wage increase which builders have refused to grant. Their walkout stopped or slowed approximately 100 million dollars worth of commercial construction in the area though they did not picket jobs.

The Building Laborers Local Union 74, which called a strike four days ago, also held firm yesterday in wage increase demands except in the cases of some independent contractors who already have granted pay raises of 15 cents an hour.

In addition, 100 driver-salesmen for four major pie-making companies stayed out to enforce their demand for a $4-a-week increase. They struck Friday and threw 200 bakers out of work. Spokesmen said conferences on this dispute may take place "early this week."

Meanwhile, conferences between representatives of Washington dairies and the AFL Milk Drivers and Dairy Employes Local Union 246 were in progress yesterday at the Wardman Park Hotel. The talks began at 9 a. m., and continued into the night.

Henry G. Baker, jr., Federal concillator, acting as mediator in the pay-increase dispute, said possibility of a strike was not mentioned in the meeting.

The 1700 dairy truck drivers acted under a wage reopening clause in their two-year work contract signed last year.

Lucas Plans Immigration Law Reform

By the United Press

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) said yesetrday he will introduce legislation tomorrow to "close the gaps" in the immigration laws which permitted Gerhart Eisler's escape.

He said the bill would give the Attorney General control over the "conduct and activities" of aliens facing deportation. Similar legislation already is under consideration by the House Judiciary Committee. It would deny bail to subversive aliens.

Lucas said, "We cannot continue to permit subversive aliens of the Eisler type to mock our laws and enforcement officers."

Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) meanwhile urged that the Air Force be used to help patrol the Nation's borders to prevent possible aerial infiltration by Soviet agents equipped with biological or atomic weapons.

By the United Press

House spy hunters yesterday said they suspect a Government source "tipped off" Soviet agents seeking wartime U. S. military secrets that counterespionage agents were on their trail.

They said their suspicions are based on independent testimony given the House Un-American Activities Committee by various witnesses, including former Communist courier Elizabeth T. Bentley. They hope to unravel part of the story at a public hearing today.

Scheduled to testify are Joseph J. Franey and his wife, Leona, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Loren Haas of Buffalo. All three were wartime employes of the Buffalo plant of Bell Aircraft Corp. Mrs. Franey still is plant librarian.

Names Made Public

They are expected to describe an alleged attempt by a high Russian official to buy secrets from them while he was at the Bell plant to acquire fighter planes for his government.

Meanwhile, Chairman McCarran (D., Nev.) made public the names of 46 persons, including 37 wartime Government employes, who were identified to his Senate Immigration Subcommittee by Miss Bentley as having taken part in Soviet spy activities.

All but nine had been identified by Miss Bentley in previous testimony. She repeated the names of such men as Author Louis Adamic, Nathan Gregory Silvermaster, who was with the wartime Board of Economic Warfare, and Victor Perlo of the Foreign Economic Administration.

She also said the Soviet espionage ring was aided by Hazen Size, an employe of the Canadian Legation here, and Cedric Belfrade who worked for British intelligence in New York.

Told to "Play Along"

The Russian approached the Bell employes in the mistaken belief they would help him. Instead, they reported to the FBI, which told them to pretend to "play along." For some time, they fed him "doctored" material of "no real value."

The Russian finally told them there would be no contacts for two months. Actually, they never saw him again.

Miss Bentley named six new Government employes as alleged members of the wartime Soviet spy ring. They were:

Peter Perazich, United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration; Ruth Rivkin, UNRRA; Bernice Levin, War Production Board; Vladimir Kazakevich, Cornell University Army instructor; Peter Rhodes, Army broadcaster in Africa and Italy, and Abraham Brothman, an Army reserve officer.

Irish Political Rivals Meet, Ask Unity for Land

Belfast, Northern Ireland, June 5 (AP).—The Irish Republic's two bitterest political antagonists crossed the vexed north-south border today and spoke for Irish unity in County Tyrone, inside partitioned Ulster.

Premier John Costello and former Premier Eamon De Valera arrived in Benburb, 35 miles from Belfast, in separate cars.

But at a luncheon that followed the dedication of the Roman Catholic priory, Costello declared "while discretion seals my lips on the political work ahead to attain the unity of Ireland, we can take comfort from the fact that all are praying for national unity."

De Valera said "the unity of Ireland will be brought about not by rashness but by careful preparation."

It was the first time in 20 years that De Valera had crossed the frontier into Northern Ireland.

Harriman Says ERP Nations Must Cut Production Costs

Paris, June 5 (NYHT).—The countries of Western Europe must increase their productivity to reduce costs and expand trade among themselves by removing commercial and monetary carriers, W. Averell Harriman, special representative for the Marshall Plan, said today.

Harriman said these steps were necessary if European countries were to become independent of extraordinary United States aid by 1952.

Another prerequisite for success of the Marshall Plan, he said, was that Americans "practice what we preach by expanding free trade. We must be prepared to import from Europe and other parts of the world in order to be able to export."

If there had been no Marshall Plan, Harriman said, "it is clear that the toboggan-slide decline which had set in in 1947 would have continued. Most of Western Europe, without American aid, would have been at a starvation level, with each country walled in against its neighbor, without reasonable hope for improvement. The deposit of hunger, poverty, desperation and chaos would have accumulated at compound interest."

Harriman said that although "great strides toward recovery have been made," much remains to be done. He said that in the three remaining years of the Marshall Plan, member countries of the organization for European Economic Administration must "cement internal financial stability" and "greatly increase industrial and farm productivity."

They "must sharply reduce the cost of the goods they want to sell, in order to compete in world markets. They must move to multilateral trade, based on convertible currencies."

Ground Broken For New Church

Ground was broken yesterday for the projected Greenbelt Community Church, slated to be constructed by December 20 at a cost of $89,415.

The Rev. Eric T. Braund, pastor of the church, said the edifice will be built of brick, with a cinder-block base. It will be at the corner of Hillside and Crescent rds. in Greenbelt.

The ground-breaking was preceded yesterday by a parade of about 500 persons from the Center School, where services now are held, to the 2½-acre site.

Marshall Asks Pact Approval; Recovery Efforts Praised

perity of people throughout the world." In developing a sense of unity among the free nations, Mr. Truman said, lies "our great hope for peace and properity."

"We have learned full well that no nation can live to itself alone," he continued. "And we have also learned that when the free peoples of the world stand united they are unconquerable."

Closes With Promise

The Chief Executive closed his brief talk with this promise:

"The United States will continue to dedicate its strength and resources to the building of a peaceful and prosperous world. We will do so in the spirit so well exemplified by this great American we are honoring here tonight."

General Marshall, in the calm and reassuring voice which became so well known to his fellow countrymen in the dark war and post-war years, explained the genesis of his plan for recovery. At the 1947 Moscow conference, he said, he became convinced that the "futile and frustrating" talks there would not lead to building a sound German economy. By the time it could be determined what should be the level of German industry, he said, it had become apparent that all of western Europe would have to be helped to help itself.

Response Was Dramatic

The favorable response in Europe, Marshall said, was "dramatic" and went a long way toward allaying opposition in this country. He then explained the feeling of distance from Europe and its affairs which has been typically American.

"Yet," he said, "seemingly in a moment, our American people found themselves in a position of not only the most intimate relationship with western Europe, but called upon to make more and heavy contributions to the welfare of your people.

"To me, the impressive fact is that these people of the United States made an overwhelming and unresitating decision to do their best to bring western Europe back to peace and prosperity. There were, of course, speeches pro and con but the American people rose to the occasion, to that world crisis, and declared themselves partners in the stupendous effort to restore Europe to a level of continuing peace. All participated — cities towns, women's clubs, and the young people. Even the little children played a valuable part.

Shows Heart of America

"That was, and continues to be, an impressive demonstration of the heart of America. And so it is hard to view this spirit of helpfulness, or unselfish public action in the light of the disparagement and defamation that has been heaped upon us through the propaganda of dictatorships in a collection of police states where freedom, as we know it and as the common people of this earth long for it, is lost through the tyranny of a few who completely dominate the many."

Addresses by Ambasasdors of the host nations were uniformly optimistic in contrast to the gloom which pervaded the Western world when Marshall made his bold proposition two years ago yesterday. Their talks were not expressions of gratitude alone; they told of progress toward the goal of economic recovery and of their redetermination to use this opportunity to make their recovery sure.

Norwegian Ambassador Wilhelm de Morgenstierne, dean of the Washington Diplomatic Corps, led the 16 Ambassadors in paying tribute to the author of their hope for the future. The Norwegian Ambassador told his colleagues that the Marshall Plan and the Truman Doctrine had "saved the free world" from communism.

Rare in Human Annals

The Marshall Plan, he said, "was something rare in the annals of humankind: it was something above any frontiers, above mistrust and hate—it was that rare manifestation of a spirit of human independence and brotherhood which must come to prevail if the world shall escape indescribable calamities."

The plan, he said, was not in its inception part of the "cold war." It was its rejection by "some countries in Europe," he declared, which made it a cold war factor.

"General Marshall," he said, "happened to be with us at a time inhuman affairs when the hard-won freedom and the freedoms and human rights of the peoples of the Western world were in deathly danger. How close the world came to defeat, perhaps we do not fully realize today . . .

Stepped into Breach

"America stepped into the breach and with the Truman Doctrine and the Marshall Plan saved the free world. That, surely, is bound to be one of the greatest chapters in the history of the unceasing struggle for human freedom."

Sir Oliver Franks, British Ambassador, spoke of Marshall as "a man who thought it his privilege to do his duty and who interpreted his duty with courage, steadfastness and inspiration." England, he said, had shown its gratitude "in our deeds as well as in our words" and promised that "with your help we are building our recovery."

Paul G. Hoffman, Economic Recovery administrator, said Marshall's "magnificent accomplishments as a military leader" had assured his place in history. But, he added, "it is my belief that it is through the Marshall Plan—a program for peace—that he will live forever in the hearts of men."

Vassili G. Dendramis, Ambassador of Greece, said his country had been kept "outside the Iron Curtain" by the Marshall Plan and the Truman Doctrine.

Florida Reports Blast of Meteor, Big Trail of Light

Miami, Fla., June 5 (U.P.).—Hundreds of residents, police and authorities at military installations the length of the Florida Peninsula reported seeing a great explosion and trail of light in the ksy tonight. It apparently was a meteor.

The Tallahasee highway partol said it also had been seen throughout southern Georgia.

The explosion occurred with a tremendous burst of light at 7:30 p. m. (EST). A trail of luminous gases and particles streaked across the sky for 50 to 60 miles and was visible until 8:15 p. m.

Weather Forecaster W. R. Davis pointed out that a meteor "usually flashes and is gone" but that this explosion was "larger than that of an ordinary meteor and the tail remained visible for at least 25 minutes."

Miners Want 40c A Ton as Donation To Welfare Fund

Bluefield, W. Va., June 5 (AP).—John Owens, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers (Ind.) said flatly today there can be no new coal contract without an increase in the operators' present 20-cent-a-ton contribution to the miners' welfare fund. He hinted the union expects the increase to bring the operators' contribution to 40 cents a ton.

He also demanded that Congress pass a strong Federal mine safety law. He criticized coal operators for failing to take what he called adequate safety precautions.

Government Defied By Czech Prelate

Prague, June 5 (AP).—Archbishop Josef Beran, fighting for the life of the Catholic Church in Czechoslovakia, told his congregation today "there can be no true Roman Catholic Church without its head in the Vatican.

The archbishop thus answered the government campaign against what it calls Vatican interference with the sovereignty of the state.

He spoke out at a pontifical mass, gesticulating with red-gloved hands, his voice roaring at times through the cathedral amplifying system.

It was the archbishop's first public statement since a breakdown in church-state peace negotiations in February. He has been advising his clergy privately in circular letters that they must disobey government "official gazettes," and he has called some government figures "Jurases" for cooperating in the program to restrict the church.

"There are three factors in the true Catholic Church," the archbishop said. "They are the faithful, the bishops and the holy head of the Roman Catholic Church. Without any of these factors there is no Catholic Church."

He had advised the clergy previously that the Czechoslovak government would attempt to set up a new "Catholic" church and other "Catholic" groups, not recognizing the Roman Catholic hierarchy.

He also had warned communicants there would be automatic excommunication for any who "collaborated" with the government.

By Sen. Connally

Security Pact Approval Is Predicted

By the United Press

Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) predicted yesterday that his Senate Foreign Relations Committee will give unanimous approval this week to the North Atlantic Security Pact.

He said the way was cleared for committee action by acceptance of a compromise by Senator George (D., Ga.) on his demand that Congress alone shall control the use of American troops under the treaty's terms of mutual assistance if any of its 12 signatories are attacked.

The compromise, hammered out by Senate foreign policy leaders and State Department aides in weekend conferences, provides that the committee report on the treaty would:

1. Make clear that the President's authority to use armed forces in an emergency without the specific consent of Congress would not be increased or decreased in any way.

2. State that nothing in the treaty shall abridge the sole power of Congress to declare war.

The terms follow closely a pattern laid down by Secretary of State Dean Acheson and his top congressional liaison man, Assistant Secretary Ernest A. Gross, when George first raised his objections.

The controversy arose over Article Five of the treaty, the so-called "operating" clause, which pledges each nation, in event of an attack against any signer, to "take such action as it deems necessary, including the use of armed force" to safeguard the security of the North Atlantic area.

George, a powerful influence in the Senate, has interpreted this to mean the President cannot use U. S. troops without prior "congressional approval" because the action was tantamount to an act of war.

Connally, Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and State Department officials vigorously opposed writing such an interpretation into the treaty report on grounds it would "undermine" the pact in the eyes of western Europeans and perhaps encourage "Communist propaganda that the United States "does not mean business."

Italy Held Set For New Rule

Rome, June 5 (AP).—Communist Leader Palmiro Togliatti, just back from a Czechoslovak Communist Congress, told a party gathering here today that "Italy is ripe to become a new democracy" like Czechoslovakia.

Togliatti spoke at the large Adriano Theater, which was filled to capacity and surrounded by heavy details of riot police.

He declared the only thing standing between Italy and "real democracy" is the police.

"In Czechoslovakia you can breathe," he said, "but here you are oppressed by the police air. You cannot pass through a railroad station here without passing in review a battalion of police."

He added that "Italy is ripe" to join the "new democracies" of eastern Europe and the Orient.

Omaha Beach—Five Years After D-Day Landing

INVASION SCENE—Beached landing craft and sunken ships that formed the artificial harbor are all that remain today on Omaha Beach in Normandy, France, where five years ago today, the great invasion of the continent began. Even these last vestiges will soon be removed by salvage companies. It was here that the U. S. 1st and 29th Infantry Divisions led the assault

Omaha Beach Rites Commemorate Invasion

Omaha Beach, France, June 5 (AP).—The Western Allies remembered today those who died fighting in the invasion of Normandy five years ago.

All along the invasion coast French villagers held ceremonies commemorating the event. D-Day was June 6, 1944, but most of the observances were advanced one day to coincide with the Pentecost Sunday holiday.

The largest ceremony in the former American zone of operations was at Omaha Beach. Towering above were the big cliffs which had been the first obstacle to American GIs after they waded ashore. In the background was the fleet of rusted ghost ships sunk after D-Day to provide a breakwater at the beach.

Landing craft, smashed in the hours of the invasion, still litter the beach. Ugly concrete pillboxes made useless for any future defense are still visible along the bluffs.

The United States was represented at the colorful but modest memorial service on the beach by Brig. Gen. Joseph O'Hare, military attache at the American Embassy in Paris, and Capt. Smith Hutton, naval attache.

The villages of St. Laurent and Vierville, near the beach, were awarded French Croix de Guerre by Robert Betolaud, French Minister for War Veterans.

A U. S. Air Force B-17 Flying Fortress flew low along the beach, fired rockets and dropped flowers. Petals showered the area where GIs stumbled ashore under cover of naval shellfire and in the face of withering German counterfire.

Labor Party Chief Denies 'Veiled Threat'

Blackpool, England, June 5 (U.P.). Herbert Morrison, leader of the House of Commons, today set the stage for the Labor Party's annual conference, opening here Monday, with a violent attack on Winston Churchill, whom he called "the Wild Man of Woodford."

(Woodford, in Essex, is Churchill's constituency.)

Speaking at a party rally, Morrison said that, if Churchill's Conservative Party is elected to power in next year's general elections, "it would mean economic confusion and trouble."

He accused Churchill of "downright dishonesty" in misrepresenting him in a speech at Woodford last Saturday.

"I said that if the Tories had to try and run the new Britain they wouldn't have their hearts in it and they would make a mess of it.

"Then I said, and these are my exact words: 'Exports and imports would get into a muddle, prices would get out of hand and, as a consequence, labor unrest would be inevitable, monopoly and restriction would flourish. The dangers of boom and bust would beset the country and threaten the livelihood and security of everyone.'"

Churchill, Morrison said, described that as a "veiled threat" to use labor unrest for political purposes.

In another speech, Morrison said, Churchill repeated that "Mr. Morrison was uttering threats about the use of labor unrest to prevent a Conservative government being returned by constitutional means

"So the Wild Man of Woodford becomes wilder and wilder," Morrison said. "His second version of what I said is less related to my actual words than his first."

Referring to current unofficial strikes on Britain's nationalized railways, on the waterfront and in scattered private industries, Morrison said:

"It is a pity . . . This action is not calculated to do the progressive cause any good, whether the progressive cause be political or industrial."

Labor Minister Aneurin Bevan frankly admitted in another speech the "danger" facing the Socialists.

"It is necessary to tell some of our people in industry," Bevan said, "that they are beginning to lose faith . . . They are in danger of throwing away by a few months of dissipating anarchy what we have spent a lifetime building up."

Bevan said he always had been somewhat skeptical about the possibility of carrying out the Socialist policy and added:

"In fact, the verdict of history is against us. Never in the history of mankind has any soviet been able to build up the complicated furniture of civilization on the basis of individual liberty."

Acheson Talks To Vishinsky

Monday to give hope of a settlement on Berlin it is likely the ministers will revert to regular sessions Tuesday at which the debate is reported to the press by official observers.

The deadlock on Berlin centers around the veto, which has been the accepted voting procedure in the Allied Kommandatura, the now defunct four-power governing body of the city.

"We are completely deadlocked on the veto principle and Russia has not given an inch," one authoritative source said. "Progress has been nil in the secret sessions thus far."

The ministers have been reported in an "area of agreement" on such issues as reconstituting the Kommandatura and reestablishing a united city government by the holding of new elections. These questions are only on the fringe of the problem, however.

Acheson is reported to have proposed limiting the veto in two ways, by defining on what questions it would apply in the Kommandatura, and by shoving routine administration problems to the Germans.

Russia is insisting on keeping all veto rights over Berlin's administration, however.

Western diplomats say there is always the possibility that the Russians will wait until the last minute and then make wholesale compromises. This was the technique she used in the final sessions on the peace treaties for the German satellites. But this hope was also entertained at the Moscow and London meetings of the foreign ministers—and it was in vain.

Soviet Police Hold 3-Day Sham Battle

Berlin, June 5 (AP).—Soviet zone people's police engaged in a three-day sham battle under Russian army supervision last week, the British-licensed Sozialdemokrat reported today.

The Socialist newspaper previously has charged Russia was organizing a police army exceeding 500,000 Germans in her zone.

The American military government recently estimated this force at about 80,000 but discounted its military effectiveness. An American intelligence officer said today he had no information confirming or refuting Sozialdemokrat's report of the maneuvers.

The newspaper said 24 Russian tanks and a number of fighter planes participated in the maneuvers at Oderberg, 28 miles northeast of Berlin.

The bitter railway tieup showed no signs of settlement in its sixteenth day.

China Communists Plan War on Inflation As Dollar Value Slumps 65% in 11 Days

Shanghai, June 5 (U.P.).—The Communist official newspaper Emancipation Daily warned today that the Communist regime plans "drastic action" to stamp out inflation, which has lowered the purchase power of the Communist dollar by 65 per cent in 11 days.

An editorial directed much of its attention to "traitorous merchants and speculators, especially silver dollar peddlers."

The article said the inflation is "bringing as much harm to the people as that caused by the bogus gold yuan currency (of the Nationalist government."

Some sources believed the rapid fluctuation of the money market here for the past two days was caused partly by an order for surrender of all foreign exchange, and banning its use except for approved purposes.

No official exchange rate has been announced for foreign currency, and it was believed business would mark time until this takes place.

Snyder Calls Proposed Chinese Loans 'Unwise'

John W. Snyder, Secretary of the Treasury, said yesterday that American loans to non-Communist China would be "most unwise."

He added his objections to those expressed earlier by Secretary of State Dean Acheson on a $1,500,000,000 credit proposed in Congress for military and civilian aid to anti-Communist forces.

Snyder's views, set down in a letter to Senator Theodore Francis Green (D., R. I.), covered fiscal aspects of the loan which was proposed by Sen. Pat McCarran (D., Nev.)

Snyder said that on two occasions the National Advisory Council, top Government agency on foreign loans, decided general credit to China was "not warranted."

Bolivian Exiles Seized in Raid

La Paz, Bolivia, June 5 (U.P.).—A group of Bolivan political exiles were arrested by Argentine police yesterday after an attack by their followers on the Bolivian frontier town of Villazon, a government communique said today.

Two La Paz newspapers asserted, on the basis of official information, that the attack was intended to touch off uprisings elsewhere inside Bolivia as part of a revolutionary general strike.

The government statement said Argentine police arrested seven leaders of the Bolvian right-wing National Revolutionary Movement (MNR) at the Argentine frontier town of La Quiaca, opposite Villazon.

The frontier was reported closed by agreement at 8 p. m. yesterday.

Those arrested included exiled MNR leaders Augusto Cespedes, former Bolivian Ambassador to Paraguay; Manuel Barrau, Luis Penaloza, Jose Cuadros, Hugo Fernandez, Nicolas Conde and Mateo Rodriguez.

Soldier Dies In Chile Riot

Santiago, Chile, June 5 (U.P.).—One trooper was killed and 26 persons were wounded by gunfire in a clash between carabineros and workers, described by the President as "Comunists and Fascists."

The incident originated when the carabineros tried to disperse an illegal demonstration, officials stated. Mayor Rafael Pacheco said the demonstrators, armed with revolvers and stones, began shooting first.

President Gabriel Gonzalez Videla estimated the demonstrators were 5000 strong. He said they had been armed by the outlawed Communist Party and had attempted a "revolutionary putsch."

M'Grath Sees Attack Via Hoover Report

Chairman J. Howard McGrath of the Democratic National Committee accused the Republicans yesterday of trying to use the Hoover Commission report on government reorganization as a vehicle to attack President Truman's legislative program.

He asserted also in a prepared statement that the GOP is trying to use former President Herbert Hoover himself in the assault.

McGrath cited the script of what he said were transcribed radio interviews between Republican members of Congress and Mr. Hoover.

"President Hoover's part of the script is to discuss the Hoover Commission recommendations in a factual manner and to argue against adopting any new Federal expenditures at this time," he said. That is a "proper" activity on Mr. Hoover's part, he added, but he objected to concluding remarks by the GOP Congressman who made "a violent, partisan attack upon the Democratic Party."

The attack, he said, implied that all present Government expenses are due to wasteful Federal spending.

"These irresponsible statements are prefaced by the member's statement, 'I agree with Mr. Hoover,' which is an effort to make the listener believe that the wild political accusations made by the member are those of Mr. Hoover.

Actually, McGrath said, "there is no indication that Mr. Hoover has sanctioned the linking of the Hoover Commission report with the irresponsible arguments of the member who interviews him."

Among U. S. Cities

District 7th In Municipal Employment

The District of Columbia had 18,590 employes in October, 1948, or 1.5 per cent of all municipal workers in the country, the Census Bureau reported yesterday. The study did not show comparative figures by years for individual cities.

The District's payroll for the month was $4,631,300, or 1.7 per cent of the total for all U. S. cities.

On the District payroll were 15,255 permanent, full-time workers. The school system had 4767 workers and other departments 10,488.

Detailed figures were not given for the municipalities in Washington's suburban area. All cities in Maryland, including Baltimore, had 20,865 workers, with a payroll for the month of $4,690,600.

Virginia's figure for all cities was 21,676 employes with a monthly payroll of $4,054,800.

In Baltimore 18,295 employes worked in October, 1948, for $4,368,400. Among the 14 largest cities of the country, Washington ranked seventh and Baltimore eighth both in employment and payrolls for this month.

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that United States cities employed 1,249,000 persons in October, 1948, an increase of 47,000 over the previous year.

in addition to multiple fractures of the skull.

Track officials said the chain of events that led to the accident began when two racers touched wheels going into the second turn. One of the racers began to spin and when Bailey, who was approaching the vehicle, turned to the outside he was struck by Cash's car traveling high on the bank of the turn.

The cars were both traveling about 60 miles an hour when they crashed, track officials said.

Cash's wife and daughter, who saw his racer as it hurtled through the air, were taken to their home, 219 N. St. Asaph st., Alexandria, by friends after Cash was removed from the track and started toward the hospital. Both were horrified, but did not know at the time Cash had been fatally injured.

Spectators crowded the rail to watch the rescue squad extricate Cash and Bailey from the wrecked racers, many not knowing until after the races that Cash, widely known and well-liked by racing fans, was dead. Toward the end of the races, however, the word began to circulate.

The races were held up about an hour by the accident, until the two ambulances, stationed at the track, returned from the hospital. Presence of the ambulances at the track are required by racing regulations.

Cash earlier in the competition had won a qualifying race and stood to win $100 in the final event.

Last Friday, he had won the feature race at the Akron, Ohio, speedway and was currently rated No. 2 man in the Eastern Roadster Racing Club. Besides his wife and daughter, he is survived by a 1-year-old son, Ronnie, jr., who was not present at the time of the crash.

William (Shorty) Bowers, roadster and midget auto racer, won the 20-lap feature event, as the racing was resumed.

Chess Wilkins, Arlington, Va., was runner-up and Bob Nay, Annandale, Va., third. The winning time was 9:41.8.

Joe Jernigan of Norfolk, Va., won the first semifinal, in which Cash was killed, in 4:02.5. Wilkins won the second semifinal in 3:52.2.

New Defense Setup Urged

postmasters by patronage has created a "frozen stratum" throughout the postal service which prevents career men from getting ahead on merit. He said more than 30,000 postmasters hold political appointments.

4. One of the best safeguards against depression would be the adoption of Government reforms which would save as much as three billion dollars a year for taxpayers. He said they then could spend the money on consumer goods.

Hoover appealed to the public to get behind his Government reorganization program and push it through Congress.

"We need the help of the American people," he said. "We have a good start, but there are many opposition forces that are developing steadily. Several (Government) agencies are already carrying on propaganda in the Congress."

that unions file financial statements.

The Administration's struggle will be to confine the amendments to that limited number. Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) has five times that many proposed changes favored by the Labor Committee minority. Republican sponsors claim few Democratic minds will be changed by the recent compromise conferences — that they can still pick up 12 to 18 Democratic votes for the whole raft of Taft amendments.

Republicans, on their part, expect only a handful of desertions. Aiken and Morse already have come out for the compromise. Still in a free-wheeling position are Senators Ives (R., N.Y.), Tobey (R., N. H.) and Langer (R., N. Dak.).

When at long last the labor bill goes to a vote, the Senate has another long debate on tap. Leaders have about decided to call up the North Atlantic Pact ahead of reciprocal trade extension.

Tom Connally (D., Tex), Senate Foreign Relations chairman, will have the pact ready ahead of schedule. He's angling for a unanimous report when his committee meets Monday. Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) has raised objections to the wording of the report, but he's for the pact, and the report may be revised to suit him.

While the Senate fries on the labor bill fire, the House will cool off this week, considering mostly noncontroversial measures.

Auto Repair Unionization Drive Begun

NYHT News Service

A Nation-wide drive to sign up an estimated 300,000 automotive repair workers—believed to be the largest remaining single group of unorganized skilled employes—has been launched quietly by the independent International Association of Machinists, it was learned yesterday.

The drive is one of the major projects of IAM President-elect Al Hayes, who begins a four-year term July 1, succeeding Harvey W. Brown.

The 672,000-member union has been organizing auto repair workers since 1933 and now embraces 100,000 of these men. At its convention in Grand Rapids, Mich., last September the IAM established an automotive department, headed by Howard Tausch of Cleveland, and set its sights on organizing the remaining 300,000 organizable workers in the field.

The drive is under way with little fanfare in 93 of the largest cities in the country, where the IAM already has one or more local unions from which it can draw organizing personnel. Forty per cent of the Nation's registered 26,200,000 passenger cars and commercial vehicles are located in these cities.

Rail Strike Hits Britain 3d Sunday

London, June 5 (U.P.).—Half of Britain's government-owned railways were paralyzed by striking engineers and firemen today for the third consecutive Sunday, marring the Whitsuntide holiday for thousands.

The engineers and firemen called the Sunday-only strike to enforce their demand that schedules be altered to eliminate layovers at the end of the line— the British call them "lodging turns."

Although officials of their own union have denounced the Sunday work stoppage as "illegal," the crews have announced they will quit work every Sunday until the Railway Executive cancels all "lodging turns."

The Railway Executive, the Labor Government group that manages the nationalized railways, reportedly is ready to dismiss all strikers next week. The executive has refused to negotiate with the strikers.

Henry Thomas, president, and his embattled slate of incumbent officers won over their more conservative slate of opponents by approximately four to one. In contrast to the turbulent election campaign, the Saturday election itself at the union's headquarters was reported peaceful. Five Metropolitan Police were on hand to watch proceedings.

The victorious Thomas slate included titular officers, business agents, executive board members, trustees and delegates to the District Labor Council.

In a victory statement, Thomas declared the election an "overwhelming vote of confidence." He said it typified the "democratic processes" the group fostered, and asserted the union has "closed ranks and will present a solid front" for "justified wage increases."

UMW Warns Operators on Welfare Fund

Bluefield, W. Va., June 5 (U.P.).—The United Mine Workers today used the occasion of a mine disaster monument dedication to warn the soft coal industry there can be no new wage contract unless the union welfare and retirement fund is continued and enlarged.

The speaker was John Owens, international secretary-treasurer, who dedicated a monument to 90 miners killed in an explosion at the Pond Creek Pocahontas Coal Co. in 1940.

Owens is expected to sit in for UMW President John L. Lewis Monday when the union resumes contract talks with the Southern Coal Producers Association. Lewis returned to Washington Friday without saying why he was leaving. (Nor would UMW headquarters in Washington tell.)

So far the negotiations have bogged down in technicalities, with specific proposals from neither side. But spokesmen for miners and operators have made clear that the welfare and retirement fund is a big issue.

Lewis is expected to demand an increase in operators' contributions from 20 to 40 cents a ton. The fund uses the money to pay $1000 death benefits to union members' survivors, $100 a month pensions to miners over 60 and other grants in aid.

Until June 1, Lewis had spent an estimated 115 million dollars since March, 1947, and had only about 30 million dollars on hand.

The operators are opposed to any increase in the tonnage levy and want to limit the eligibility

Expert Advice On Home Care Lacking in D.C.

Metropolitan Washington is far behind many other cities in making use of available expert advice on urban agriculture.

It now is 35 years since Congress voted to create Cooperative Extension Work in Agriculture and Home Economics. Designed primarily to instruct farmers in the latest ideas and developments in agriculture and how to improve their living conditions, Extension has extended its benefits to city dwellers as well.

This aid to urbanites takes two forms: home demonstration work and horticulture advice, for the care of lawns, shrubbery, trees, etc.

Active During War

In virtually every city, home demonstration work has been available to city dwellers for some time. These home demonstrators teach better housekeeping, modern cooking methods, canning, etc.

Such assistance in home demonstration work in cities has been furnished for several years in Maryland counties surrounding Washington, particularly in Montgomery and Prince Georges.

But beyond this, very little has been provided residents of the Greater Washington area in urban horticulture.

There are several reasons. First, county agents are supported equally by the county, State and the Federal Government. It was started to help agriculture. The District of Columbia naturally hasn't a county to employ one, nor a State extension service, to draw on.

Survey Report Completed

In Virginia, Alexandria and Arlington always have been considered urban rather than rural by the Virginia Extension Service, and agents offices never were set up there.

Recently a study of "Cooperative Extension Work in Urban Areas in the Northeastern States" was completed by a committee of seven, chosen for the job by M. L. Wilson, director of extension work of the Department of Agriculture.

On this committee, headed by L. R. Simons, director of extension of the College of Agriculture of Ithaca, N. Y., were two leaders in extension work from Maryland. They were Dean T. B. Symons and Milo S. Downey of the University of Maryland. Much of the work was done by John Magruder, county agent leader, at College Park.

Idea Not New

Wilson hopes the committee's report on the results of extension work in urban areas may encourage the District Commissioners to take steps to get both services, home demonstration workers and urban agriculture work.

It is not a new idea. The work was started 30 years ago, during World War I, in Syracuse, Buffalo and Rochester, N. Y. The work is financed in various cities in different ways. In Paterson, N. J., there it a city appropriation; in Milwaukee the State Agricultural College has financed the work and in New York State a 1946 law authorizes State appropriations for work in cities located in counties having an urban population of 25,000 or more.

Brannan to Defend Program At Iowa Talks Starting Sunday

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Agriculture Secretary Brannan will carry the Administration's farm program to the Nation this week.

Brannan will present the program, better known as the Brannan Plan, to a group of Democratic officials, party leaders, farm organizations and labor groups at Des Moines, Iowa, next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Sixteen States will be represented at the meeting, at which the keynoter will be Vice President Alben W. Barkley. Eight Governors have been invited, and six already have indicated they will attend. They are John Bonner of Montana, William Lee Knous of Colorado, Forrest Smith of Missouri, Roy J. Turner of Oklahoma, G. Mennen Williams of Michigan and Henry J. Schricker of Indiana.

Others May Attend

Governors Adlai Stevenson of Illinois and Frank J. Lausche of Ohio have promised to attend if legislative work in their States will permit.

In addition, according to Democratic National Headquarters, 10 Senators and 20 Democratic Congressmen from farm States have made reservations.

Besides Brannan, three other members of President Truman's Cabinet are slated to appear. They are Attorney General Clark, Postmaster General Donaldson and Labor Secretary Tobin. Commerce Secretary Sawyer and Treasury Secretary Snyder may attend for one day of the three-day meeting.

The last day will be devoted to Midwest politics. Leaders from each of the 16 States will meet on that day with Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath and Executive Vice Chairman William M. Boyle, jr.

Reasons for Choice Cited

The choice of Des Moines to start the grassroots fight for the new farm proposal is due to two reasons, those close to Brannan reveal:

1. Brannan chose the Iowa capital as a challenge to Allan Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, leading opponent of his plan. Iowa is the Farm Bureau's strongest State and is Kline's home. Before heading the farm organization Kline was prominent in Iowa Republican politics, and during last fall's campaign was mentioned several times as potential Agriculture Secretary in the Dewey Cabinet.

Party Workers Briefed

2. It was in Iowa that President Truman, at Brannan's advice, opened his campaign for the farm vote last year. That speech at Dexter, followed by a county-by-county stumping tour by both Brannan and Barkley, is credited with carrying rock-ribbed Republican Iowa for the Democratic ticket.

In preparing for the meeting the national committee last night released a question and answer discussion of the "new Administration farm program." In sending the release to party workers in the Farm Belt, the committee called it "a handy reference in answering inquiries about the program."

Older Workers Hold Onto Jobs

A survey by State employment services showed yesterday that unemployed older workers have more trouble than younger workers in finding new jobs.

Nevertheless, workers 45 years old and over have held onto their jobs better than younger ones since the war ended. Furthermore, in areas where there is relatively little unemployment the number of job seekers among older workers is less than among younger workers.

Doctors' Personal Lobbying Defended

By a Post Reporter

Atlantic City, N. J., June 5.—The directors of organized medicine's educational campaign to combat compulsory health insurance tonight defended personal lobbying of congressmen by their own physicians.

Without direct reference to open criticisms of such tactics, Clem Whitaker, whose public relations firm is handling the American Medical Association program, told the National Conference of County Medical Society Officers that defeat of compulsory health insurance depends largely on "individual effort and personal missionary work."

"One American talking to another—that's real democracy in action," he declared.

Called "A False Doctrine"

"Even Oscar Ewing (Federal Security Administrator) can't really complain about that, although some of the advocates of compulsory health insurance do seem to think that it's wrong for a doctor to talk to his congressman."

Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.), another speaker on tonight's "grass roots conference" program, said compulsory health insurance embodies "a false doctrine and a hope that is only an illusion" under a "most flattering and appealing label."

Earlier today, delegates to the same conference were told that the District of Columbia Medical Bureau keeps a "little brown book" listing District drunks and drug addicts for guidance in calls for "emergency" medical services.

Placard Is Displayed

Whitaker, in his speech at Hotel Claridge tonight, described the fight against national compulsory health insurance as "a showdown battle between Americanism and stateism" and a fight against "a world sickness, a wasting illness of millions of people who have made economic drug addicts of their governments."

Opponents to national compulsory health insurance, he said, will wage their fight against it on debate platforms, in the newspapers and magazines, over the radio, and by pamphlets, posters and word of mouth.

He urged that physicians apply for copies of a new campaign poster, "Don't Put Politicis in This Picture," which attempts to publicize the dangers of socialized medicine under a reproduction of Sir Luke Fildes' famous painting, "The Doctor." The city is placarded with the reproduction for the ninety-eighth annual business and scientific sessions of the AMA which get under way here Monday.

Senator McClellan said Congress cannot legislate good health. He added:

"There are some fields of service, of course, in which the Federal Government can and should properly participate by aiding the medical profession and the public in preventing disease, in carrying on scientific research and experimentation, and also by helping to provide the hospitals and clinical facilities necessary for the care and treatment of those who are ill.

"Beyond those limits it cannot very well go without invading the inalienable rights of the individual and regimenting the medical profession."

Existence of the District of Columbia's "little brown book" of alcoholics and narcotic addicts was revealed at a morning panel discussion of county medical officers by J. Richard Connelly, assistant secretary of the D. C. Medical Society.

The "little brown book," he explained, is for guidance of telephone operators in handling emergency calls for help. It lists alcoholics "who have proven to be uncooperative and who have no desire to better themselves" and drug addicts "who are experts at feigning 'kidney colic' (to obtain the drugs their bodies crave)."

"The names of these people are listed in our book, and calls from them are screened with a great deal of caution," Connelly declared.

Doctors Told Of Artificial Heart Tests

By N S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Atlantic City, N. J., June 5.—Development of an artificial heart to replace animal hearts for as long as 46 minutes was reported here today by research surgeons of Philadelphia's Jefferson Medical College and Hospital.

Object of the research is twofold, said Dr. John H. Gibbon, jr., professor of surgery and director of surgical research.

The first is for clinical use on patients suffering heart failure, to ease temporarily the strain on the heart. If this can be done successfully on humans for as little as 5 to 30 minutes, the difference may mean life to some heart attack victims, Dr. Gibbon said.

To Give Surgeons Time

The second, and "more important" goal is to give heart surgeons sufficient time to repair faulty or diseased inner structures of the heart, it was pointed out.

Dr. Gibbon and other researchers at Jefferson last January reported in the Annals of Surgery their success in replacing heart valves in experimental dogs with healthy tissue—in the two to three minutes that life permits cessation of normal, unassisted heart activity.

If surgeons can gain half an hour instead of two to three minutes (when brain damage begins) they will have a far greater chance of repairing congenital malformations of the heart or diseased heart valves. Most common heart valve affliction occurs in children suffering from rheumatic fever.

Today's progress report was made by Dr. Gibbon's research assistant, Dr. Thomas Lane Stokes, of Philadelphia. Pictures of the machine were shown to the third annual session of the Society for Vascular Surgery, one of the newest medical and surgical specialties.

Kept Cat Alive

The machine, Dr. Stokes explained, is a development of original research carried out some 15 years ago by Dr. Gibbon in which the surgeon succeeded in keeping a cat alive some 20 minutes without flow of blood through the heart.

Experimentally the veins returning used blood to the heart are tied off, and the blood is drawn by a pump into the machine. Here, it is sprayed on a moneel-metal revolving cylinder, rotating in the same direction and at the same speed as the incoming blood so that the blood is spread out on the drum in a thin film.

The film of blood is then oxygenated, in artificial duplication of the lung's function, by exposing it to 100 per cent oxygen. It collects in a cup from which it is pumped back to the aorta and blood circulatory system through an arm, leg, or neck artery.

Opportunity For D. C.

Support for the District home-rule bill appears to be reaching bandwagon proportions. Since the Senate unexpectedly passed the bill last week without a dissenting vote, people have been asking themselves, "Why not?" To that question there is only one answer in keeping with American principles and traditions. Disfranchisement of the District has never rested on any rational or deliberate policy. It is simply a product of neglect, and as soon as a concerted effort is made to end that neglect defenders of the status quo are left without a leg to stand on.

Majority Leader McCormack has aroused new hope that the increased momentum behind the bill may carry it through the House at the present session. Not only does he give it enthusiastic backing, he has also pledged himself to "cooperate in every possible way in bringing it up for early consideration on the floor." With the President and the Majority Leader both pulling for the bill, and with an active Republican support behind it, we do not see how it can fail in the House if it is brought to a vote. The real question is whether it can be dislodged from Representative Oren Harris' Subcommittee and the full District Committee.

Mr. McCormack can be enormously helpful, of course, in stimulating the District Committee into action. Chairman McMillan has promised that the bill will not be bottled up, although he opposed a similar measure last year. Let that promise be put to a rigid test. The community now has an excellent chance to clamor for brief hearings and prompt action. It will be greatly aided by the interest the bill has stirred up beyond the District. Editors and civic groups across the country have suddenly become concerned over the enormity of disfranchising 900,000 citizens in the District. Even in Germany an editor, who visited Washington some months ago, writes in amazement of the votelessness of the American Capital. The story has but to be told to enlist the sympathetic interest of people who believe in self-government and fair play. And if ever there was a moment which called for intensified telling and retelling of the District's sorry predicament, certainly that moment is here.

Attack On The Slums

At least a glimmer of hope for Washington's wretchedly housed families shines through the events of last week. Engineer Commissioner Young has taken the first step toward drafting a housing and sanitation code for the purpose of enforcing minimum standards of decency in housing. Senators O'Mahoney and Saltonstall are attempting to provide funds for the District's long dormant Redevelopment Land Agency. To families living in decaying, rat-infested and insanitary structures these moves may seem very remote and ineffectual. But they constitute a start toward recognition of this city's appalling housing problem.

The importance of a housing code is that it would provide up-to-date standards by which the fitness of structures for human habitation could be readily and fairly judged. In the absence of any such code, Washington harbors 9850 outhouses and 44,000 dwellings that, for one reason or another, are substandard. Many of these could be put in livable condition if a modern housing code were being properly enforced. Overcrowding is another appalling problem. Four years after the end of the war thousands of families are living in single rooms and basements, as if Washington were Moscow. Conditions of this sort will continue to exist, to the great detriment of the health and morals of the community, until a housing code is properly adopted and enforced.

Baltimore has effected a noteworthy clean-up of its slums by making regular inspections and promptly dealing with offending landlords and tenants through a housing court. There is good reason for Washington to follow this example. But everyone should realize from the beginning that it is no substitute for more basic reclamation of slum areas. Thousands of rotten hovels now occupied in this city are not worth repairing. They must give way to new developments in harmony with city-wide planning. This, of course, is the task of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Land Agency, which are now before Congress pleading for funds.

If the program is going to succeed, moreover, the clearance of slum areas must be preceded by the building of low-rental houses for the families who will be displaced. No such building has been done since the war. The National Capital Housing Authority now has a waiting list of 18,000 families seeking accommodation in its public housing. The city's worst slums cannot be wiped out until the acute pressure on low-rental living quarters has been relieved. It is of the utmost importance, therefore, that in proceeding with the other aspects of the program, the supply of decent low-rent dwellings be substantially increased.

T-H Compromise

The Senate debate on the Administration labor bill repealing the Taft-Hartley Act begins today. The real fight will not revolve around the repeal proposal but around the amendments to the bill offered from the floor. For it is a foregone conclusion that the Senate will not approve the Thomas bill in its present form. Nor do we think that eleventh-hour amendments, hastily thrown together by Administration leaders and somewhat similar to the Rayburn compromise rejected by the House, will satisfy the Senate.

The most important of these amendments, dealing with the handling of national emergency strikes, would limit remedial presidential action to 90-day seizure of struck plants. But since there is no provision for enjoining strikes or lockouts, the President would have no means of forcing a resumption of operations after seizure. Another amendment would retain the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act requiring a financial accounting from unions and extend the requirement to employer organizations. Retention of the accounting provisions of the present law is unquestionably needed as a protection against the looting of union treasuries or dissipation of funds by racketeers and incompetent officials. While it may be desirable from the viewpoint of company stockholders to demand an accounting from officials of employer organizations, such a requirement seems out of place in a bill dealing with employer-employe relationships.

The three other proposed amendments call for non-Communist and non-Fascist oaths from employers, as well as union officials, guarantees of free speech to both employers and employes, and recognition of the obligation of both management and unions to bargain in good faith. Similar provisions are now incorporated in the Taft-Hartley Act and we see no reason for discarding them. Nevertheless, they are, in our opinion, of minor importance as an aid to peaceful collective bargaining.

This compromise plan leaves untouched major controversial issues. It would remove the ban on the closed shop, thereby opening the door to monopolistic union practices that would bar newcomers from jobs. It would discard the protective provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act designed to safeguard the handling of welfare funds on which several million workers are now relying for old-age pensions, disability and other benefits. While it would forbid political contributions by banks and Federal corporations, it would put no prohibition on political contributions by labor unions. And it would seriously impair the effectiveness of the independent Mediation and Conciliation Service by returning that agency to the Labor Department, which, rightly or wrongly, is regarded by employes as having a prolabor basis.

Cited omissions merely serve to illustrate the many glaring deficiencies of the Administration proposal. Unless the leaders in Congress are willing to make much greater concessions than those suggested it seems unlikely that its program will be approved, even though members of Congress are under pressure from the Executive and threatened by labor-union reprisals at the polls. The alternative is to risk passage of a measure that will meet reasonable tests of adequacy and put it up to the President to decide the outcome, thereby risking a veto that would leave the Taft-Hartley Act in force. While that would have the unfortunate result of making labor legislation an issue in the next congressional election, it would be a lesser evil than enactment of a law that would invite a return to the abuses which led to passage of the Taft-Hartley Act.

A. P. Giannini

The death of A. P. Giannini, founder of the world's largest commercial bank, the Bank of America, removes one of those colorful personalities who gained for this country its reputation as the land of opportunity. For Mr. Giannini was a self-made man who worked his way upward from poor and obscure beginnings to a position of power and influence. In the course of his long career he experienced severe rebuffs and setbacks and became the target of official as well as unofficial attacks. But he always came back. In fact, the great banking system associated with his name has grown so rapidly that Transamerica, the giant bank holding company that he founded, and its affiliates are said to control about 600 banks in five Western States. The Bank of America, which operates only in California, was launched by Mr. Giannini in 1904 as the Bank of Italy with a very small capital. At present it has more than 500 branches. Its deposits total between five and six billion dollars and it serves about four million depositors.

However, the size and rapid expansion of what is often called the Giannini banking empire have caused the founder some uneasy moments. Only a few weeks ago Mr. Giannini was in Washington attending hearings in the unique antitrust action brought by the Federal Reserve Board against Transamerica for its alleged attempt to create a monopoly in the commercial banking business by acquisition of bank stocks. Many independent bankers in the States where the holding company operates fear its growing power and would welcome Government action to prevent further expansion. That fear itself is a measure of the driving energy and ambition of the founder of this huge banking complex.

Whatever his faults or failings, Mr. Giannini is entitled to credit for his pioneer work in bringing his banks into more intimate contact with little people, small businessmen and traders. It requires imagination and optimism to break away from conventional patterns of banking behavior. Those valuable qualities were clearly demonstrated in Mr. Giannini's emphasis on the importance of humanizing banking and making the services of his banking chain easily available to the people of the communities in which its hundreds of branches are located.

Children's Judge

Few more important District appointments are made than that of Juvenile Court judge. Good judges for children's courts are far more difficult to find than good judges for other courts. For in the case of the juvenile judge it is not only learning in the law and judicial temperament that must be sought but also experience in social work and a broad understanding of children. Congress recognized this fact when it laid down the qualifications for the Juvenile Court judge in the present law. To be eligible for this appointment, it provided, "a person must be a member of the bar, preferably of the District of Columbia, and have a knowledge of social problems and procedures and an understanding of child psychology."

The District Bar Association is trying to get this eligibility rule changed so that the President could appoint to the Juvenile Court only lawyers who have been members of the District bar for five years. We think that would be a grave mistake. Much as we favor the naming of local lawyers to District judgeships as a general rule, it is unmistakably clear that the highly specialized nature of this judgeship calls for a wider range of choice. The Bar Association has named three local candidates for the judgeship Congress is expected soon to create because of the prolonged illness of Judge Bentley. No doubt each has special qualifications. But, in our opinion, the President ought to reach out for the ablest, most experienced and judicial-minded person who can be induced to take the assignment regardless of where his work has been done.

One other factor seems to demand special consideration. A recent study showed that 66 per cent of the boys who come into the court's juvenile department are 14 years of age or over. All the offenders in the adult branch of the court on nonsupport charges are men. These factors strongly suggest the desirability of naming a male judge if the right man can be found. The prospect is that Congress will give the court the two judges it needs; that would make it feasible to name a woman to succeed Judge Bentley when her present term expires. In any event, only the highest regard for special fitness can guide the President and the Department of Justice to the right choice in this instance.

DP Laggards

If revision of the Displaced Persons Act goes by default this session, it will be an unworthy mark against an extraordinarily dilatory Congress. The House Subcommittee on Immigration has, to be sure, worked hard and intelligently. Its modified version of the original Celler bill has just been passed by the House. The measure, if not everything that could be—and was—asked, is a decent piece of legislation. It goes a long way toward divesting the present law of its discriminatory and administratively impossible features.

Specifically it raises the total DP quota to 339,000 over a three-year period. It places the "cut-off" date at January 1, 1949, a fine testimony to the committee's common sense as well as its sense of justice. In place of the racial and occupational specifications of the present act, the Celler bill prohibits discrimination in the selection of DPs because of race, religion, or nationality.

House passage of this measure without further weakening amendments is a considerable feather in its cap. Now it is up to the Senate to show whether or not the ideals of justice and of good administrative procedure carry equal weight at the other end of the Capitol. To be specific, it is up to Senator McCarran. In the 144 days since the McGrath-Neely bill (identical to the original Celler bill) was referred to the Judiciary Committee on January 10, Chairman McCarran has given it no chance for a hearing. Even yet none is scheduled. This sluggard filibuster to keep a bad law on the books is deplorable.

TIME LINGERS

The rainbow fades,
The dream is done,
Friends leave us
And our grief is vain,
While Time,
A mountain in the sun,
Heeds not the snowflake,

Beauty and dreams,
Like golden weather,
Will come again,
But not that one
Who sleeps
Where the willow's
Emerald feather
Brushes the marble

'Hoover And J. Q. Adams'

The Senate vote for suffrage and home rule here encourages me to "try my wings" as a soon-to-be first class citizen on an issue which is being seriously debated.

It is that former Presidents, Cabinet officers and other officials of the Federal Government should have opportunities of putting their knowledge and experience at the service of their fellow men.

The issue is put in its most extreme form by Walter Lippmann, who urges in his June 2 column, that such officials be given seats and full rights except the vote in the Senate and House.

Nothing prevents any official from going before the people and offering his services to the American people by running for public office as John Quincy Adams did. This opportunity is open to everyone and it is up to the officials themselves to make the decision. No other opportunity to be of service needs, nor indeed should, be offered to anyone.

A public official who considers it beneath his dignity to run for office has misread or does not understand the democracy which gave him high office, nor does such an ill-considered stand on his part commend him for any public service.

Further, how long would such officials be content with non-voting seats in either house of Congress? VOTER-TO-BE.

Action For Peace

Once again the peace-loving peoples of the world turn their eyes toward the meeting of the four powers at Paris. Let our Secretary of State ring out in a clear voice the one great desire of the American people; peace, but not at any price!

It is so perfectly obvious what the Communist pattern is—yet with compromise after compromise we are allowing ourselves to be used to fit the Russian plan. The America that arose so triumphantly from the second great war should be second to no one in matters of guidance in the path of democracy. Let us go ever forward in our efforts to represent the people's will, with unfaltering courage, during this, our hour of decision. We must not wait until our Soviet friends decide to come to our terms at their will for it is as though waiting for the seas to go dry. Present our terms then act.

Washington Housing

In his letter of May 29, Marion Stewart Cake, Duck Harbor, Me., comments on how small a part of the cost of the art galleries and cathedrals and Jefferson memorials would have been sufficient to eliminate the slums of Washington. Frank Lloyd Wright thought the money for Washington buildings misspent from the viewpoint of organic architecture and the welfare of the individual. What must be Lincoln's thoughts when his spirit visits his memorial statue. That statue needs only turn his bronze head to his left for his eye to glance up 23d st. along which only the trees have freedom of the sun and air.

It is good to know that individuals from Wisconsin and Maine, and from every one of the 46 other States understand our housing and environmental needs. But as Mr. Cake warns, better housing must come now.

Freedom Of Thought

Congratulations on your May 31 editorial, "Academic Freedom." It clearly delineates the dangers inherent in laying down rules for political and social thinking in the realm of education.

Related to the current attempts to find real and imaginary subversives among teachers in our schools and colleges is the continued sniping by congressional committees at scientists and top executives in the employ of the Government.

All this, and more, brings to mind the assaults upon the intelligentsia made by Hitler, Mussolini, and their Cuban counterpart, Machado, as they came to power.

The parallel ends when we consider which branch of the Government presents a threat to our constitutional liberties. Alexis de Tocqueville, the great liberal Catholic writer of the nineteenth century, quoted Jefferson as saying, "The tyranny of the legislature is really the danger most to be feared." This is not to say that there are no legislators who cherish the Bill of Rights and the spirit of free inquiry. There are many who are careful of the rights and reputation of every citizen, but there are far too many who are actuated by fear and suspicion, tending to limit our freedoms while professing to safeguard them.

Our founding fathers were of the opinion that freedom of religion, speech, and press were necessary safeguards against tyranny rather than avenues to the installing of tyranny.

Thomas Jefferson said: "Subject opinion to coercion: whom will you make your inquisitors? Fallible men: men governed by bad passion; by private as well as public reasons. And why subject it to coercion? To produce uniformity. But is uniformity of opinion desirable? No more than of face and stature."

The guardians of our Nation during these days of stress should take pains to avoid confusing intelligence with heresy, non-conformity with disloyalty, and individuality with insubordination.

Payments In Gold

Nothing will be gained, in my opinion, by adopting the suggestion of Mr. K. R. J. Prowse, in your May 28 issue. As long as gold is pegged in dollars, but dollars are not pegged in gold, we shall have the situation of which Mr. Prowse complains.

The solution is quite simple, as I see it. In 1933 we fixed the price of gold at 35 dollars per ounce. Then we proceeded to make it illegal to have gold in one's possession. The only thing a person possessing gold could legally do was to sell it to the Government for $35 per ounce. Thus pegged gold in dollars. But if you had dollars you couldn't buy gold for monetary purposes from anyone at any price, legally. Dollars were therefore not pegged in gold.

Balance payments between countries may be made in gold or dollars. With gold pegged in dollars, the net effect of gold payments in settlements of balances between countries is that they are made at the rate of $35 per ounce. This, in effect, fixes the value of the dollar in foreign exchange, around which currency all other currencies then tend to circulate.

Not only is this the fact but governments, in desperation at the resulting dollar scarcity, devalue their own currencies in terms of dollars in order to get more dollars, to get more goods from the United States. At the same time they gain advantages over our exporters in all other countries, very much as Germany did before World War II with her aski mark.

The obvious solution of this situation is to go back to what caused it. This Government caused it by first pegging gold in dollars and then removing gold from circulation. What we were trying to do was raise prices by raising the price of gold and thereby lowering the price of dollars in all other commodities. This would have happened had we not then taken out of circulation the very commodity — gold — through whose inflation we hoped to inflate the dollar. All that happened, however, when we removed gold from circulation in this country but continued to use it to settle international payments, was to peg the dollar in gold in international transactions only.

The thing for us to do is not tinker further with the price of gold in dollars, but make effective the pegging process of 1933 by making gold freely exchangeable with commodities.

Socialist Threat

The hue and cry over the menace of communism serves as a "red herring" to distract attention from certain individuals and groups whose activities, if successful, will terminate in the ruin of America.

Any moves or legislation resulting in the destruction of personal liberty, of our successful capitalistic system and of the Christian religion will inevitably demolish our American form of government. It is clear, therefore, that liberalism, new dealism and internationalism, all forms of socialism, are inimical to the welfare and constructive development of the United States.

It is amazing and discouraging to see certain intelligent leaders apparently so blinded by their desire for high office or reelection that they have not taken the trouble to investigate the facts of socialism.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

China—A Summing Up

CANTON.—It is not pleasant to watch a nation in defeat and decay. It is not pleasant to realize that this defeat and decay in China, which constitute a disaster for the United States, could have been prevented by wise, forehanded American action. But the important thing at the moment is not to bewail the disaster that has ocurred here, but to try to find out what should now be done about it.

American policy in the Far East can now have only one primary aim. The aim must be to stop the threatened absorption of all of Asia into the Soviet sphere. As this correspondent reported from Tokyo, even Japan and the Philippines will be in immediate danger, if the Communist tide washes out of China into Indo-China, Siam, Malaya, Burma and Indonesia. The disaster in China will thus become a world catastrophe. The first task is to prevent this.

The task will not be easy, since the Communist movement of Ho Chi Minh is already strongly established in northern Indo-China, while the harassed Burma government is being challenged by two simultaneous Communist rebellions. The task will be almost impossible, if the Chinese Communists gain the southern border of China and link up with their Burma and Indo-Chinese brethern. Hence the Chinese border provinces of Yunnan and Kwangsi, remote, backward, mountainous and impoverished though they may be, are now one of the vital strategic areas of the modern world.

IT MUST BE SAID that very few official Americans in China believe that Kwangsi and Yunnan can be kept out of Communist hands, to become an insulating zone between Communist China and southeast Asia. But then, the consistent defeatism of responsible Americans has already caused us to miss every other earlier opportunity to get the Far Eastern situation in hand. Whatever is done now will be a gamble. But the stakes upon the table are now so enormous that a gamble is justified.

The conditions that permit a gamble for Kwangsi and Yunnan have been described at length in a previous report. Very briefly, Kwangsi is the private domain of China's Acting President, Li Tsung-jen, and Li's partner, one of the ablest Chinese military leaders, Gen. Pai Chung Hsi. The province has always been well governed by Li and Pai. It is loyal to them. And it is defended by their large army, which they have now concentrated in their home territory.

Yunnan, on the other hand, is in turmoil at present. But bandits, not Communists, are the Yunnanese problem. For the present, moreover, Yunnan is sealed off from the Communist armies by Kwangsi, which lies to the east. And even if the Communists quickly penetrate the high natural barriers, and capture Szechuan Province to the north of Yunnan, they must still fight their way into Yunnan down one of the most difficult roads in the world.

Thus if Kwangsi can be held, the whole strategically vital area can be held—for a time. The time thus gained may then be used to organize a better situation in Yunnan. It may even be used to explore the possibility of aiding the non-Communist groups in Szechuan and the Chinese northwest, which would be a far more ambitious project.

HOLDING KWANGSI will not be so difficult as one might suppose. In this strange war, there has been very little real fighting since the fall of Peking. Even Nanking, the capital, was taken because the generals of three Nationalist divisions and the defenders of Kiang Yin Fort sold out to the Communists. The Communists have merely poured into a vacuum left by the economic and moral collapse of the Nationalists.

There has been no moral collapse in Kwangsi. The approaches are forbidding. There are troops there in plenty, ready to fight. But President Li and General Pai are disastrously short of funds, which in China more, even than anywhere else, are the sinews of war. For a long time, they have been pleading fruitlessly with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek for some of his hoarded silver from Formosa.

The first step, therefore, if the gamble for Yunnan and Kwangsi is decided upon, is to forget the fiction that we must have dealings only with the National government in China, which has ceased to exist for all practical purposes. We must continue to do business with Generalissimo Chiang, because he holds Formosa, which is also strategically vital to us. But without regard for Chiang, we must begin to do business directly with President Li and General Pai as well.

Only self-confidence deriving from assurance of direct American support will sustain Li's and Pai's will to resist. Fortunately, not much support is immediately needed. A manageable quantity of arms, plus about 50 million dollars of the useless silver that we bought to please the silver lobby and have hoarded at West Point should be enough to transform Kwangsi into an anti-Communist stronghold, at least for a considerable period. The Communist tide may thus at least be checked. And even a fairly short check should have two crucial results.

It should give the French time to seal the Indo-Chinese border, which is the worst danger point. And it should give us time to begin making Far Eastern policy in a bold, clear-headed way, instead of continuing to imitate chickens with their heads cut off.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Big Four Grown Smaller

THIS MEETING of the Big Four has been remarkable for its lack of big talk, big plans, and big gestures. That may well be because since last they met such big things have happened in so many parts of the world. For it is quite evident that the Big Four have shrunk in influence and power as the war has receded into the past. Even if now they were able to agree among themselves, their decisions would no longer shape the future of Europe and of Asia as, at Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam, it was once believed the Big Powers could.

LIPPMANN

PERHAPS IT was from the beginning an illusion to think that the big victors could agree on a settlement for the whole world. Perhaps it was an even greater illusion to think that if they did agree, their settlements would be accepted by the whole world. In any event it is now manifest that the area is rapidly contracting in which the Big Four together or the Big Four separately can make decisions, can impose them or get them accepted. In Germany and in Japan, in eastern Europe and in the Middle East, in China, in Southeast Asia, and of course in India, the day has passed, or is passing, when the Big Four can hold a meeting and then dictate or determine the shape of things to come.

This downgrading of the Big Four is, I venture to think, the principal reason why the meeting in Paris arouses so little hope and excites so little fear. Once it was believed that Churchill, Stalin, and Roosevelt were deciding the destiny of mankind. Almost no one feels that Vishinsky, Schumann, Bevin and Acheson are deciding the destiny of mankind.

THE DICTATORSHIP of the Big Four, about which so much was said at the end of the war, has not happened. It broke down completely during the cold war. It was supposed to be followed by the division of the world among two super powers, struggling to decide whether the capital of mankind would be Moscow or Washington. This conception of the future has been dissolving—rather dramatically during the past year.

It is increasingly plain that no one power is going to dominate the world, that no two powers can divide the world, and that the political influence of both Russia and America, which was so greatly inflated in 1945, is being deflated.

IT IS NOW certain that despite the unconditional surrender, it will be impossible for the victors to dictate the peace treaties with Germany and Japan and that by one process or another the settlements will be negotiated with the Germans and the Japanese. Moreover, in almost the whole of Asia and in most of Europe, there is beneath all the intricate and confusing events, one common current which is causing the dissolution of control by the big powers.

Not only the old colonial empires but also the more recent postwar spheres of influence—the Russian in eastern Europe, the American in China—are caught in this tremendous current of resistance and rebellion by the native populations against distant and alien big powers.

THE OVER-SIMPLIFIED formula of the cold war—that all the world will go "democratic" or will go "Communist"—is, it seems to me, a fallacy which must be discarded before we can hope to see at all, much less see clearly, the course of events, and our part in them.

For we are now beginning to deal, and we shall have to deal increasingly, with Germans, Japanese, Chinese, with Indians, with Arabs, and with others who will not fit themselves readily into the alignments of the cold war, who will play their own part, will pursue their own interests, seek their own advantages, and will settle for themselves many questions that the Big Four have talked about at one time or another but have not been able to settle for them.

Tydings Says Atom Probers Have Revealed Nothing Yet

By the United Press

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) yesterday said the congressional atomic energy investigation has produced nothing yet to back up charges of "incredible mismanagement" against David E. Lilienthal.

He made the statement as the chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission prepared to appear again Monday before his principal accuser, Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), who hurled the mismanagement charge.

Hickenlooper refused to say what line his new inquiry will take, although he said it should be "interesting." He originally scheduled a news conference for yesterday afternoon and then called it off about two hours before the scheduled time.

Errors Conceded

Asked about the change in plans, a spokesman in his office said personal considerations were involved. Pressed for information about Hickenlooper's probable line of questioning, he asserted:

"He hasn't started and I doubt that he will until tomorrow."

Tydings summed up his views of the investigation in an interview over radio station WBAL in Baltimore. He conceded that mistakes probably had been made in the atomic program and that there are differences of opinion over how it should be run.

Mistakes Called Inevitable

But he said the program is such a vast and important undertaking that mistakes are inevitable and that Congress should be tolerant unless actual mismanagement is proved.

"It (the investigation) has not gone far enough yet to have proved the allegations that Mr. Lilienthal and other members of the commission have been inefficient," Tydings said. "These are only charges."

Lilienthal Assails 'Myth' Atom Alone Makes U. S. Safe

East Lansing, Mich., June 5 (AP). David E. Lilienthal today said nothing could be more dangerous to world peace than acceptance of the "myth" the atomic bomb alone can make America safe.

Addressing the graduating class of Michigan State College here, the chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission warned that Americans "must not allow ourselves to develop a kind of national jitters . . . we must not become a bunch of nervous Nellys and timid Timothys" in a time of world crisis.

Neither, he said in a prepared address, should Americans become "bewitched by the atomic bomb" to the point where they depend on what they believe to be its "black and secret magic" to keep this country secure.

"We Can Be Fooled"

"It is in the spirit of America that our great strength is found," he said. "The foundation of the republic is the moral sense of her people, a sense of what is right and what is wrong. The faiths we hold are the chief armament of our democracy."

Lilienthal, who has been charged with "incredible mismanagement" of AEC affairs by Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), told the graduates "a certain amount of national self-examination is inescapable, and indeed at this juncture in world events, wholesome."

Asserting that "we can be fooled for a time by the cheap headline hunter—or political headhunter," he added that "these are times for sense, not sensationalism."

Communism Called Threat

Lilienthal, who has been a target for criticism because the AEC granted a study fellowship to at least one Communist, said, "The principles by which we live are basically opposed to and demonstrably superior to communism."

"Communism is a modern version of an ancient form of tyranny over men," he declared. "It has, in one of its forms, destroyed the German and Japanese people. It now threatens the peoples of all Europe and of Asia."

Personnel Cuts On Attrition System

MANY in Federal agencies would agree that important gains in reduced personnel requirements seem possible. A 5 per cent reduction should be fairly easy, with substantially larger reduction a real possibility given a method that will favor rather than impede the process.

Although it is sometimes said that those occupying Federal positions are inclined to resist economy, it is a fact that through agency suggestion systems many suggestions are submitted and adopted. That all is not perfect in regard to internal agency activity toward economy is admissible.

However, it would seem to be of practical value to note the substantial thought among Federal personnel for economy improvements, and to find ways of reducing such resistances as may be present so as to expand these wholesome tendencies. It is entirely possible that relatively minor changes in personnel administration might have wide effects toward removing tendencies of unwarranted budget justification, program invention, etc.

Unfortunately the present system for reductions-in-force is not conducive to reduction of over-all personnel requirements. In the immediate it gives rise to such inefficiencies as "bumping" in chain reaction, internal conflicts of interest for functions, inequities and time-consuming employe appeals, etc. That this system tends to arouse job and budget defensiveness is apparent.

THE ANSWER for real economy potential seems to be present in a more suitable transition when budgets and programs are changed. Suppose that such transition rules provided that when reduction in budget takes place reduction-in-force shall be by attrition only. By such a transition system the 2 per cent monthly vacancy rate would be used to achieve reduction in personnel over-all. No employes would go off payroll or be reduced in grade in the transition. Vacancies would be filled by transfers only, perhaps under Bureau of the Budget or Comptroller General direction.

Many benefits to the Government seem to be present in such a transition system:

1. Neutral attitude of personnel toward proposed cuts in budget, proposed reorganizations, etc.

2. Substantially increased proposals by personnel for job-reducing economies.

3. Decreased proposals for job-continuing functions.

4. No loss of experienced personnel merely because they happened to be in a particular assignment when it was abolished.

5. Removal of much of the need for unemployment compensation for Federal employes.

6. Increased public service neutrality (political) of Federal personnel, particularly in regard to Federal spending policies.

7. NO TREPIDATION at the moves of Congress. Removal of unconscious defense mechanisms and reduced job consciousness should enable much fuller cooperation with congressional objectives, without conflicting feelings.

8. Better daily individual performances.

9. Federal employes would need less individual financial reserves with consequent benefit to business.

10. Larger expenditures by Federal employes for education peculiarly applicable to Government.

11. Vital work of short duration would be able to have better personnel, since undue quest for "secure" places would be unnecessary.

12. Reduction of misassignments now occurring due to "personal patronage." Easy individual jeopardy intensifies personal machine formations.

13. Much fewer semifictitious budget justifications.

14. Other parts of the personnel system would work better:

a. Earned promotions would not be abolished by accident of budget. Advancement hard-won over the years may now disappear overnight.

b. In-grade awards for meritorious service can now be lost within a short time by loss of grade or even reduction-in-the force dismissal.

c. Ramspeck with in-grade increases can be lost by drop in grade.

d. Personnel who submit adoptable suggestions for economy may now lose out in reduction-in-force procedure. Private industry finds that suggestion systems have lower yield under such circumstances.

IN OPERATION, the number retained on the payroll for transition should be filled by transfer only until these are permanently reabsorbed. In the interim they would be available for use wherever there were backlogs.

Employes would still be terminated for cause, but not for change in budget or programs, etc. In such an atmosphere there should be little if any conflicting feeling about economy-producing activity, and the entire Federal service would be placed on a much more wholesome footing. The 2 per cent monthly normal vacancies seem to provide the necessary implement for over-all reductions of personnel requirements by attrition.

Economy from 5 to 10 per cent and perhaps more should be quite readily within reach from the installation of the attrition method alone, whereas budget reducing by other methods has not been fruitful. In establishing this method, it would be important to permit the present displaced career employes to re-enter at once.

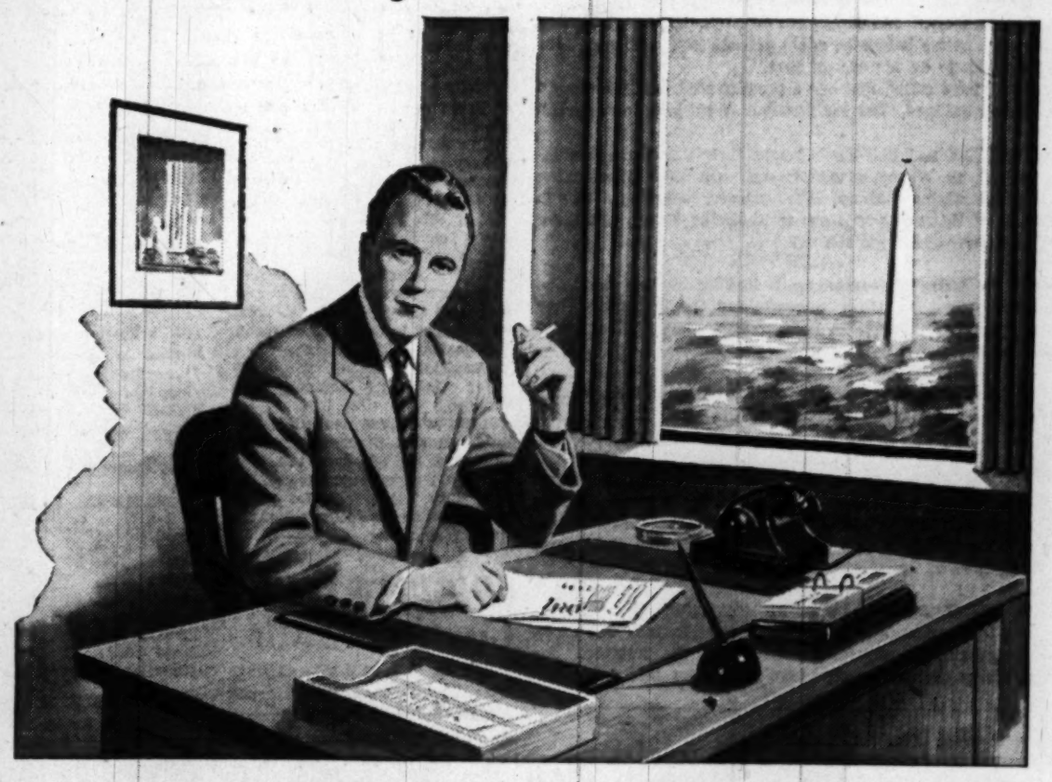
What kind of a bank do I want?



If you as a business man asked yourself this question, wouldn't your answer be something like this?

"First of all I want a strong bank—one where my company's funds are protected by every safeguard."

That's how our directors feel too. That's why 99% of the securities we hold are short-term government bonds.

"I want a bank that's service-minded and able to reach decisions quickly just as I have to do.

Our officers are aware of the necessity of rendering quick service, and they realize that taking a business risk is part of the banker's function.

"I prefer a bank that can take care of any banking or trust service need my firm might have."

The Union Trust offers a complete range of banking and trust facilities for the large or small firm.

"I'd like a bank where my firm's account will be sufficiently important to receive the personal attention of the bank's senior executives."

The Union Trust is a growing institution, but our seniors make a point of giving close attention to business accounts.

If that's what you want in a bank, why not visit the Union Trust? Or simply phone us. We would be pleased to call on you to explain in detail how we can serve you.

bles on display as golfers, or would-be golfers.

It was glittering parade off the first tee, with master of ceremonies Harry Wismer superintending the introductions and as on the first day's play, professional and amateur cameras recorded the procession.

Again it was Attorney General Tom Clark hitting the first ball of the day in the tournament dedicated to the raising of funds to combat the rising curve of juvenile delinquency.

From Hollywood came Hope and Crosby and Jane Russell, the last named to window-dress the first tee proceedings while Hope and Crosby renewed their long-standing golf feud.

From New York came publisher William Randolph Hearst, jr., and columnist Leonard Lyons; from the Cabinet came Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin, and Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder; and from the high military came the Chief of Staff, General Omar Bradley; Secretary of the Air Force Stuart Symington; Chief of Staff of the Air Force, Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg; and from the Navy Admiral Wm. H. Blandy, chief of the Atlantic Fleet.

Out of Congress came George Smathers, of Florida; and Les Arends of Illinois; and from football All-American Charlie Justice. Baseball sent its high commissioner, A. B. Chandler, and the pitching idol of a decade ago, Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove. Basketball produced its Horace A. (Bones) McKinney of the Caps.

The first tee, on occasion, was strictly show-business, with a quartet of Crosby, Hope Sammy Snead and Lew Worsham rendering "Home on the Range," over the microphones in a bit of by-play that only the National Celebrities tourney could offer.

More than half of the vast throng overlooking the first tee and lining the first fairway, trailed the feature foursome of Crosby-Hope-Snead-Worsham, in which Hope and Snead announced they had a side bet with the Crosby-Worsham duo.

The unpredictable Crosby, a serious golfing figure in the first day's play, let himself go yesterday, and hyped it up for his admirers with his impish posing and back talk. Hope, too, was posturing all over the course, and it was 18 holes of high comedy.

Fazio Fires a 31

Crosby finished perspiring and soaking wet in the warm afternoon in contract to the quasi-ebullient Hope who was still clowning on the eighteenth green with a drab-complected little valet in attendance on him, as well as his caddy.

Beaten out for the amateur division title by Hope, there was satisfaction for Crosby yesterday, however, in the 72 he shot on the final 18, a stroke better than Hope's though his bid to wipe out the three-stroke lead Hope gained on the first day was futile.

To get his 66, Snead was out in a sizzling 32, and back in 34, but the hottest nine holes of the day were posted by the smallish but smart-smoke Fazio, touring pro from Morristown, Pa.

Fazio posted a phenomonal 31 on the outgoing nine for a new course record, shooting five threes. He was unable to overcome the three-stroke lead Snead took into the final round, but he would have made it closer, save for the bogies on the seventeenth and eighteenth holes. He had a 35 coming in despite those lapses.

Third among the pros was handsome Cary Middlecoff, golfing dentist from Memphis, who turned in a smart 68 for the second 18 for a 138 total, one better than the 139 Lew Worsham, native son.

Miss Lenczyk, in capturing the women's title, was outscored yesterday by a stroke by Peggy Kirk who turned in a 73, but with her lead of yesterday, Miss Lenczyk had two strokes to spare.

Pace Leads Official Golfers

Budget Director Frank Pace led the golfers of the official Washington group with a two-day total of 155, with his 78 of yesterday.

High honors among the high military fell to Gen. Omar Bradley who broke 80 with a sparkling 79 for his second day's play and a total of 161. He undercut by one stroke the card Air Force Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg who soared to 83 after a 79 in his opening round.

The private duel between the co-owners of the New York Yankees was resolved in favor of Del Webb, who posted a 77 yesterday for a two-day total of 154, five shots better than his partner, Dan Topping.

Snead was never over par on any hole, and shot 6 threes, 12 fours to record his 68, over the hilly course. His final putt hung on the eighteenth green, else he would have matched his record 65 of the opening round.

TEE OFF ON A TUNE—Before puttering around, Bob Hope, Sammy Snead, Lew Worsham and Bing Crosby hold hands and unlimber their vocal cords for a rendition of "Home on the Range," golf range, of course, at Army-Navy Club yesterday. Later Hope revealed that he thought they were chanting a dirge for the Cleveland Indians, one of his pet philanthropies

Stars Offer Fans Laugh Per Minute

By Bill Gold
Post Reporter

Sam Snead and Bob Hope teamed up at Army-Navy Country Club yesterday to defeat Lew Worsham and Bing Crosby, 2 up.

Betrayed by a treacherous putter, Snead "blew up" and had to be content with a 5-under-par 66. Worsham had a rough trip on the outgoing nine, but matched Snead blow for blow on the backstretch, to rack up a clever 69.

Hope and Crosby, aided by 8-foot "gimmies" (and a Hope handmashie from a sand-trap) were credited with 73 and 74 respectively.

Snead started out like a house afire. A drive and a crisp iron shot put him 15 feet from the pin on the par 5 first hole, and the PGA champ curled his tricky putt straight and true for the hole, for an eagle 3.

It was the last time in the match that Snead's ball was in the hole.

Thereafter he failed to sink a putt, scoring near misses on everything from 6 feet to 40 feet, and always being conceded his second putts, which never lay more than 24 inches from the hole.

Sometimes Sam was off line with his putts; sometimes he was hopelessly short, like any Sunday duffer; and sometimes he rimmed the cup or hit the back edge and rolled off. But after the first green, nothing would drop for him.

Those Booming Drives

His birdies, as usual, resulted from his prodigious length off the tees. On the 293-yard ninth, which is an uphill carry all the way, Snead drove past the pin to the back edge of the green. On the 365-yard fourteenth, his drive carried to a shallow sandtrap alongside the green.

Worsham, like Snead, had trouble with a balky putter. But his irons were deadly, and on several holes sensational approaches kept him in the running.

On the tenth, which is a sharp dogleg, Worsham tried to drive over the trees but failed to carry. His ball fell into a jungle of trees and rough so dense that he was barely visible to the gallery on the green.

But a sensational sand-wedge shot came hurtling through the foliage and came to rest 6 feet from the pin. Snead shook his head in disbelief and called out: "Hey, boy: you must have had Daniel Boone by the hand on that one."

Having recovered from his seemingly impossible lie, Lew blew the chance for a birdie when he missed the putt.

Bing and Bob Tickle Fans

Hope and Crosby had a lot of fun, and put on a great act for the galleries. But for most of the round they were completely outclassed as golfers.

However, on the fourteenth, Hope reached the green in two, casually surveyed a 15-foot putt, and rammed it home for a birdie that won the hole.

Nobody was more surprised than Shovelnose, and he admitted it—meantime taking out time to lead the applause for himself.

Crosby didn't "figure" in a hole for his side until the eighteenth, when he tied Snead with a par 3, for a half. But the damage was done by then; the Snead-Hope team took a two-hole advantage on the front side, and kept Worsham and Crosby even on the incoming nine.

However, there was a laugh a minute, to keep contestants and spectators in high good humor, Hope said. "Thank you, Dad," every time Crosby conceded him a putt.

Anything could happen, and usually did. On the par 3 sixth hole, not one of the four players hit the green with his tee shot, and all took bogie 4's. Yet on the par 5 thirteenth hole, all four contestants took birdie 4's. It was that kind of match; possibly the best summary of it was furnished by the spectator who watched Snead blow a 6-foot putt and murmured:

"If that lad would learn to putt, he'd go far in this game."

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

With the Celebs

THE BIGGEST upset in the three-year history of The Washington Post's National Celebrities Tournament took place at exactly 12:14 o'clock. Jane Russell appeared on the first tee, without a sweater.

The importance of the left hand in the golf swing was nicely demonstrated by Jimmy Nichols in a 15-minute exhibition before the tournament got under way. With his right sleeve empty, the one-armed Nichols hit eight irons and six irons that would have been acceptable as drives by half the tournament field. And his drives were the kind to tempt the duffers to cut off their own right arms.

POVICH

George Fazio, the Philadelphia pro who teed off in an early foursome, was probably wondering what a guy has to do to make good in the Celebrities Tournament.

In the first day's play, Fazio clipped a stroke off the competitive record for the Army-Navy links, and was the tournament leader and record-holder for exactly 35 minutes because a fellow named Sam Snead came along with a 65, undercutting Fazio by three strokes.

ON THE FIRST TEE, Baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler demanded a retraction by the reporter who described his driving stance as "foot-in-the-bucket." Chandler pointed out patiently that his left foot was anchored to the ground, and that his only worry about his golf game was that he might be standing too close to the ball—after he hit it.

YANKEE OWNERS Del Webb and Dan Topping were a cheerful pair with their ball club out in front winning in the American League pennant race. "It's nice to know," grinned Webb, "that our boys are playing the Browns again today."

ARMY-NAVY CLUB officials warned spectators that the wooden bridge leading from the first tee across the gully was old and unsafe for passage. And obviously contained in the warning, too, was a hint to the Senators and Congressmen in the field to deal gently with the military budget.

SECRETARY OF LABOR Maurice Tobin, teeing off with Chick Evans, Jug McSpaden and Maj. Gen. Clark L. Ruffner, took five shots off the first tee before he could get one in the fairway. He whiffed completely on his second shot.

"You could have called that one a practice shot, Mr. Secretary," Harry Wismer quipped, "but you grunted. We'll have to count it."

BING CROSBY and Bob Hope fought their way through autograph seekers to Wismer's microphone. On their Washington visit, they are mixing pleasure with business, including a trip to the Bureau of Engraving to learn if it can be turned out there as fast as Crosby and Hope can make it.

SAMMY SNEAD, not content with leading Crosby and Hope in the tournament, led them in song from the first tee. They rendered "Home, Home on the Range," after learning that talent scouts were in the gallery.

HOPE POSED for the newsreels with a gang of kids seeking his autograph. It was all too grim to his liking and he said, "Come on, kids, laugh like I just said something funny."

HOPE'S FIRST drive was a beaut, and he interrupted his follow-through in his haste to take a bow to the gallery. Freddy Corcoran, former PGA tournament manager, confessed: "I've followed Hope for years, and I still can't tell at what exact point his swing ends and his strutting begins."

COMIC STRIP AUTHOR Ham Fisher, teeing off with Gen. Omar Bradley, Jug McSpaden, Major General Ruffner and Chick Evans, had thrilling news for the gallery at the first tee. Joe Palooka, Fisher promised, would take a bride on June 24.

Browns Lose, Then Stop Yanks To End 11-Game Losing Streak

St. Louis, June 5 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns snapped their 11-game losing streak at the expense of the New York Yankees today when they copped the second game of a double header, 7 to 6, after dropping the first game, 6 to 4.

A six-run outburst at the expense of their old team-mate, fat Freddy Sanford, and the Yanks' ace reliever, Joe Page, brought the Browns their first victory since May 25 and their first in seven games with the Yankees. Dick Kokos capped the rally with his tenth homer of the year with two men on base.

Billy Johnson's three-run homer clinched the first game for the league leaders. He hit a two-run pinch homer in the nightcap.

Nats Win, 7-6, Lose, 5-4

Kuhel's Men Take Opener in Ninth, Waste 3-Run Robinson Homer in 2d

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Chicago, June 5.—The White Sox entertained the Nats at lunch today, but the courteous Griffs picked up the tab for dinner.

To the dismay of 19,632 Comiskey Park patrons, the Nats stroked out a 7-6 decision in the first game of the five-hour-and-31-minute doubleheader, but the Sox charged back to pocket the nightcap, 5-4.

The split left the Nats exactly where they started—in third place. The victory in the opener promoted them to second, but Sid Hudson's inability to hold a 3-0 lead shoved them down a notch again.

Although Eddie Yost unloaded his fousth homer and Sherry Robertson parked his fifth of the season in the opener, Pitcher Ray Scarborough emerged as the hero.

Rushed into the breach in a relief role after the Sox had tied the score at 6-6 and were threatening to do more damage, Scarborough doused the fire and scored the winning run in the ninth to help himself to his fifth pitching success.

The curve-balling righthander also saw an inning's duty in the afterpiece, but not even his presence could rouse the Nats enough to make a sweep of the doubleheader.

Hudson, suffering his fifth reversal, had the home run bat of Eddie Robinson working for him, but the angular righthander simply didn't have it, being clipped for 12 hits, including a home run by Cass Michaels in the fifth which tied the score at 4-all.

Errors by Yost and Sammy Dente moved Philley around to third base in the sixth inning and he romped in from there as Luke Appling swished out the single to drive him home with what turned out to be the winning run.

Robinson's king-sized smash in the first inning, which found Sherry Robertson and Ed Stewart aboard, was at the expense of Allan Gettel, who lasted less than three innings.

Ex-Nat Chic Pieretti pitched one and two-thirds innings, but the lad who stopped the Nats cold was Bob Kuzava, young lefthander who chunked three-hit, shutout ball for the last five innings to gain credit for his second win.

Robinson knocked in the fourth and last Nat run in the third inning with a single to move the Nats in front, 4-1, but Hudson couldn't stand prosperity. A walk, singles by Joe Tipton and pinch-itter Steve Souchock, coupled with Floyd Baker's grounder, gave the Sox two runs in their half of the fourth. Michaels tied it in the fifth with his fourth homer to set the stage for the dreary sixth.

To start things, Yost turned Philley's easy grounder into a

Godfrey Says He's 'Diamond'—in Rough

Arthur Godfrey demanded to be called "Diamond Godfrey" at the National Celebrities Golf Tournament because he spent "so much time in the rough."

Although the official score board credited the Tom Clark-Arthur Godfrey-Lefty Grove-Leonard Lyons foursome with only nine holes on Saturday, Godfrey insisted he'd played 18—two holes at a time. "Why should you take only four strokes when you can have more fun with eight or nine?" he wants to know.

Jumpers Will Continue Suits

New York, June 5 (AP).—Damage suits against organized baseball will be continued despite Commissioner A. B. Chandler's action in reinstating suspended players, attorneys for three former major leaguers under ban said tonight.

"The commissioner knows he is licked, that's why he is taking this action," said Frederic A. Johnson, lawyer for Danny Gardella, former New York Giant outfielder who is suing for $300,000.

"He knows the baseball contract can't stand up in court," Johnson added. "Sure we're going ahead with our suit."

John L. Flynn, representing former St. Louis Cardinal Pitchers Max Lanier and Fred Martin in their $2,500,000 suits against the game, said also the action would have no effect on the suits.

"We're going ahead," Flynn said. "We are suing for damages." Flynn added he was "happy" that the players had been reinstated.

Johnson said Chandler took his action after seeing the "handwriting on the wall. The reserve clause hasn't a prayer in court," he said. "Besides we have damages—heavy damages."

Griffith 'Expects' To Rehire Ortiz

President Clark Griffith of the Nats said last night he "expects" to give a job to Roberto Ortiz, husky outfielder who jumped to Mexico in 1946 and was reinstated by Baseball Commissioner Chandler yesterday.

Ortiz has been playing this season in Venezuela. Griffith declared he had not been in communication with the 200-pound Cuban outfielder but would welcome his return "because we are short of right-handed hitting outfielders, and Ortiz hits a long ball."

Chandler Lifts 'Jumpers' Ban

Brooklyn catcher, who jumped to Mexico in 1946.

"Get your bag packed and get to your club right away," he told Owen, who has been playing with a semipro team in South Dakota.

In response to questions by reporters, Chandler declared, "In lifting the ban I ordered, I believe I am tempering justice with mercy."

The commissioner said he had not discussed his action with the various club owners before welcoming the players back, but had "talked it over" with Presidents Will Harridge and Ford Frick of the two major leagues.

"Of course I would not invite them to return if I were not certain they would be rehired," he added.

Washington Senators — Outfielder Roberto Ortiz, Infielder Chile Gomez.

Philadelphia Athletics—Outfielder Roberto Estalella.

St. Louis Browns—Catcher Myron Hayworth.

Detroit Tigers—Infielder Murry Franklin.

St. Louis Cardinals—Pitchers Max Lanier, Fred Martin, Second Baseman Lou Klein.

New York Giants—Pitchers Ace Adams, Adrian Zabala, Sal Maglie, Stan Breard, Harry Feldman, First Baseman Roy Zimmerman, Outfielder Danny Gardella and Infielders George Hausmann and Napoleon Reyes.

Brooklyn Dodgers — Catcher Mickey Owen, Outfielders Luis Olmo and Roland Gladu.

Philadelphia Phillies—Pitcher Rene Monteagudo.

Chicago Cubs—Chico Hernandez.

Sacramento — Catcher Jim Steiner.

Six of the players are now performing in the Canadian Provincial League. Maglee has a record of five wins without a defeat for the Drummondville Club, with which Lanier has won five and lost one. On the same team, Zimmerman has hit 11 home runs thus far.

The Chicago White Sox' Alex Carrasquel had breached his contract before he "jumped" to Mexico and is still banned.

Chandler amplified his statement with a tribute to Owen and other players who had refused to join in the suits against organized baseball. "Owen has sort of represented the jumpers who wanted to return to us, and he merited consideration from me."

Chandler declared "I always intended to give consideration to reinstatement of the players at some later date after suspending them . . . after the Mexican League failed to live up to its glowing promises, many of the players petitioned me for reinstatement . . . at that time, I refused, in fairness to players who had remained with their clubs and carried out their obligations . . . now in the interest of fair play to all, and the hope that the misguided young men will now be able to make a fresh start, I have restored them to eligibility, on application."

Gen. Bradley Plays a Steady Game

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Gen. Omar Bradley, Army Chief of Staff, carved out his own niche in the National Celebrities Golf Tournament yesterday.

Unofficial honors as the steadiest and most serious nonprofessional in the field at Army-Navy Country Club went to the lanky officer with the jut jaw.

General Bradley yesterday shot a 79, which coupled with a first-day 82, gave him a total of 161. You got the impression that every time the general plays 36 holes he has within three strokes of that same total.

The general didn't get a single birdie yesterday. But he was never more than one stroke over par, completing 10 holes in regulation figures. He never took more than five strokes on any hole as he registered nines of 39 and 40.

Dr. Cary Middlecoff, low scorer in Bradley's foursome, had a brilliant 68 and almost matched the general's steadiness with birdies on the second nine. On four of the first five holes he was 1 under par. He had seven birdies during the 18 holes in rounds of 33 and 35.

Three more birdies fell to Jimmy Thomson, golfdom's longest hitter, who fired his second 71 for 142.

The fourth man in the group, Ham Fisher, creator of the comic strip Joe Palooka, turned in a 92. It was the first score he turned in. His outstanding effort was on the ninth and fourteenth holes, where he had pars.

3 Teams Tied For County Lead

Lee's Tavern, Snug Harbor, and Greenbelt are all tied for first place in the Prince Georges Suburban league, after games played yesterday. Lee's won over Greenbelt, 7-2, Snug Harbor downed Mount Rainier, 9-2, and Rogers Heights defeated Capitol Heights, 3-1.

Crescent Cafe Blanks Pete's, 5-0

With Abe Leviton pitching 3-hit ball, Crescent Cafe turned in a 5-0 victory over Pete's in a Western Twilight Softball League game yesterday.

Betty White, 'Bones' Tie in Accent Battle

By Jack Kearney
Post Reporter

Southern accents were so thick in one foursome of the National Celebrities tournament yesterday that one could almost smell fried chicken and hominy grits.

Horace (Bones) McKinney and Charlie Justice, both of North Carolina, paired up with Betty Mims White and Betty Jameson, who hail from Texas.

McKinney, Washington Caps basketball star, the tallest celebrity, an dMiss White, the most petite, both tallied an 80. Miss White, who turned professional only three weeks ago, won the Texas State amateur championship last year.

Miss Jameson Gets 81

Miss Jameson, one of America's leading women golfers, came in one stroke behind for an 81.

Justice, an All-American halfback at the University of North Carolina last year, did all right, too, with a score of 89. Not satisfied, Justice lamented, "maybe ah'd better stick to football."

The brawny touchdown specialist kept the gallery laughing by praying after tee-off shots, "Oh honey! please keep out of the rough."

This foursome did the Southern tradition of politeness proud by complimenting each other on almost every shot, good or poor.

Bones Compliments Himself

Ol' Bones even complimented himself once. After a tremendous drive on the seventeenth hole, he exclaimed, "I jes' love that one."

These players were especially appreciative, too, of the crowd's approval of their game.

Miss White went out and came in with a 40; Miss Jameson went out with a 40 but came back with a 41; Bones stroked a 39 on the way out but that debbil heat slowed his second nine holes down to a 41; Justice, who, suh, would rather not discuss his score, carded a 48 on the first nine but improved his game and on the second nine tallied a respectable 41.

Tom Clark's Legal Rulings Aid Lyons; Grove Says He'd Rather Pitch Than Golf

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

Yes, indeedy, a little knowledge of the law can be mighty helpful.

Settlement of some fine legal points helped Leonard Lyons, the Broadway columnist, post a neat 93 for the 18 sun-seared holes he traveled yesterday at the Army-Navy Country Club in the National Celebrities Golf Tournament.

Lyons (who was a lawyer for five years before his transition to columnist) accepted his legal advice from Attorney General Tom Clark—and who wants to dissent with that worthy gentleman?

If Lyons dubbed his first tee shot, Clark ruled an automatic consent decree which entitled little Leonard to another try. Of course, the same ruling held good for Clark himself and the third member of the golfing three-some, one - time great Lefty Grove.

But Clark and Lefty needed more than consent decrees. They needed a little more direction off the tees and more magic in their putters. Each had 102.

Arthur Godfrey, the radio and television whiz, was to have played with Lyons, Clark and Grove but he didn't make it. Godfrey played nine holes with the others Saturday afternoon, then followed that with the three-hour "homecoming" show at the armory Saturday night. A guy can do just so much.

The cards of yesterday—which would hardly stand close inspection by any Court of Appeals—were:

Out:
Clark	5	8	5	6	8	6	4	5	5	—52
Lyons	5	7	5	5	5	4	6	3	5	—45
Grove	6	4	5	7	8	4	8	5	6	—53
In:
Clark	7	5	4	6	5	7	7	6	3	—50—102
Lyons	3	6	6	6	5	7	6	5	4	—48— 93
Grove	5	5	4	5	6	6	6	5	5	—49—102

Clark allowed as how golf is fun "even if you're not hitting them well."

"But, general," interjected Lyons, "I've found out it's just as much fun when you're shooting pars."

Lyons had opportunities for birdies on several greens but his putting was not all it could have been.

"The closest I've been to a birdie is the Stork Club," he sighed.

Several minutes later, on the 10th green, Lyons chipped a shot from the edge of the green. The ball traveled 20 feet to the cup, kerplunked in—and kerplunked out.

The attorney general ruled that the ball had passed over the cup and was a birdie three.

At the 14th tee, a caddie instructed the players that if their tee shots went into the ditch down the fairway they could remove the balls without penalty.

"This is the hole you've been waiting for," someone remarked.

"Not me," declared Grove wearily, "I'm waiting for that 18th hole."

Lefty figured he'd rather pitch nine innings than go 18 holes of golf. "And I'd do better than I'm doing now," he added reflectively.

Lefty almost got a hole-in-one. On the 11th tee, he poked his shot to the left and wafted it onto the adjoining second green. The ball dipped into the hole and out.

Jug McSpaden Fires 69 to Beat Evans

By Bill Gilbert

There was a lot of fun and joking at the closing day of the third annual National Celebrities golf tournament, but there was a lot of good golf, too.

The laughs were supplied by Bob (my 'Paleface' is no longer pale after this sun") Hope and his gag partner, Bing Crosby, while the golfing skill was furnished by the likes of Sam Snead, Lew Worsham, Harold (Jug) McSpaden, and Chick Evans.

McSpaden and Evans played in a foursome along with Maj. Gen. Clark L. Ruffner, chairman of the executive committee at the club and tournament director, and Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin.

Two Under Par

McSpaden shot a two under par 69, while Evans carded a 72, General Ruffner an 87, and Secretary Tobin a 93. The aggregate total for the two days of play showed McSpaden with 143, Evans 153, and the Secretary with 194. General Ruffner did not play yesterday.

McSpaden got off to a roaring start. He birdied the first two holes and parred the third. He went one over on the fourth and ninth, while parring the others. On the back nine, he birdied the eleventh, fourteenth and fifteenth and parred all the others but the seventeenth, when he went one over again.

Chick Evans, veteran of 30 years on the links, executed fine drives and chip shots, while shooting his 38, 34—72.

General Ruffner, who doesn't get a chance to play the course so often as he'd like, showed that he still has the old touch, getting off accurate drives and putting nicely.

Tobin, another one who doesn't play too often, had some tough luck on his tee shots, but patience triumphed, if Tobin didn't, and he showed a 93 for the day's effort, an eight-stroke improvement over yesterday's 101 score.

Again yesterday the boys enjoyed themselves and the galleries enjoyed them too. They were all up for the occasion when it came to the perfect retorts.

Evans got off a powerful drive playing the twelfth hole and General Ruffner shouted enthusiastcally: "That's a beauty. It might be in the cup." Whereupon Evans hopefully said, "Oh, that would be something. Then I wouldn't have to putt."

Grays Divide, Hold Lead

The Washington Grays divided a doubleheader with the Raleigh Tigers yesterday at Griffith Stadium before a crowd of 4000, maintaining their lead in the Negro American Association. "Hen" Kaiser defeated the Carolinians, 19-2, in the opener, and Hubert Glenn was credited with the Tigers' 9-6 victory in the nightcap.

First Game

Tigers	000	101	000—	2	10	4
Grays	846	024	00x—19	21	1

Second Game

Tigers	000	423	0—9	15	1
Grays	040	100	1—6	6	4

Glenn, Hartwell (7) and Sayles; Trice, Kaiser (5) and Clifford.

Topping Records a 78

Fazio Posts 3-Under-Par 68; Burton, Hill Both Equal Par

By Jack Kearney
Post Reporter

George Fazio, golf instructor to a couple of enthusiasts named Hope and Crosby, gave his gallery followers a lesson or two yesterday as he led his foursome with a three-under-par score of 68.

Fazio, who won the 1946 Canadian Open championship, was in fast company, however. Close behind him were Allan Burton, home pro at the Army-Navy Country Club where the National Celebrities Tournament was held, who carded a par 71, and Ray Wade Hill, Louisiana pro, who did the same.

Dan Topping, coowner of the American League-leading New York Yankees, completed this group. Playing with a pro's seriousness, Toping shot a 78, bettering his Saturday's score of 81. Needlessly apologizing for his showing, the mahogany tanned Topping explained, "The heat got me."

Scores for the first nine holes were representatively low. Fazio stroked a 31; Burton, 39; Topping, 39, and Hill a 35.

For good golfing, there were few foursomes better than this one. Most persons came to the tournament to see celebrities but several also came to observe some of America's top golfers in action.

These fans, plus Burton's personal following, made up the gallery who—though neither mad dogs nor Englishmen—went out in the midday sun and were well rewarded.

Miss Lenczyk Wins With 74

A torrid rivalry among the country's top lady golfers passed another landmark yesterday as Grace Lenczyk, U. S. Open and Canadian champion, outscored Peggy Kirk by a single stroke in the National Celebrities Tournament.

Miss Lenczyk, with her second straight 74, had a total 14? to edge out her slender opponent. The two stellar professionals played together both days of the big tourney, and at the end they were actually only five inches away from breaking even.

Those five inches were the distance by which Miss Kirk missed her final putt, an 18-footer. She finished yesterday's round with 73, one better than Miss Lenczyk, for her 149.

For the second straight day the men in the foursome took a back seat. Representative Tom Pickett dropped from a first-day 86 to a nifty 81 and a 167 total. Harry Hurt, a Texas friend of Attorney General Tom Clark, had another 86 for 172.

Nats 'Don't Distract' Her

Helen Detweiler Shoots 73 While Listening to Ball Game

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Helen Detweiler, pro out of Indio, Calif., broke a cardinal golfing rule right in front of two promising young amateurs yesterday in the National Celebrities Tournament.

She kept only one eye on the ball. The other was glued to a portable radio, which was carrying an account of the Nats' 7-6 victory over Chicago in the first game of their double header.

The pert Miss Detweiler did okay though. She had a 73 to win out in her threesome which also included Beverley Hanson of Fargo, N. Dak., with 77, and Representative George Smathers (D., Fla.), with 83.

A native Washingtonian, Miss Detweiler explained on the eighth hole that listening to the Nats' game while she's playing does anything but distract her. "In fact, whenever they go ahead, I get inspired," she said. She proved it by following Eddie Yost's homer with a pin-point 30-foot putt.

Helen is the only woman ever to broadcast major league baseball games. She did it several years ago, touring the Midwestern American League cities under contract to General Mills.

Likewise, Miss Hanson and Smathers kept their attention on the Nats' progress, Miss Hanson "because I think Clark Griffith is such a cute and lovable man" and Smathers "because I'm practically a Washingtonian, you know."

Smathers, described by master of ceremonies Harry Wismer as "the handsomest man in Congress," literally had a rough time of it during the first nine with his tee shots consistently landing in the rough. The strapping Flordian had a 45 going out and when asked how it felt to get trimmed by two frail looking ladies replied, "Not too badly. These ladies are very polite."

Coming back though, Smathers began to hit 'em straight, and once when he dropped in a 35-foot putt, he remarked, "I've been practicing that one on my table all week."

On the ninth hole, the threesome of Pauline Betz Addie, Representative Les Arends (R., Ill.) and Budget Director Frank Pace caught up. Smathers bet Arends "a trifling sum" that he'd lick Arends. Arends won with an 81. Mrs. Addie had an 80, and Pace, keeping within his budget, had 78

Agriculture Secretary Charles Brannan was also supposed to play in the Hanson-Detweiller-Smathers group, but was called away to an emergency conference.

Patuxent Sailor Wins Shoot Trophy

Sailor Ralph Edwards of Patuxent River Naval Base, won the Norman Motor Co. trophy with a 2376x2400 to take top honors among the local shooters in the Greenbelt Gun Club tournament held yesterday and Saturday at Greenbelt.

Second among the locals was Mrs. Ruth Morgan of Takoma Park, Md., with a 2356x2400. L. L. McDonie was high expert, scoring 2351x2400, and Carl Wood of D. C. was high marksman, registering a 1171x1200 for yesterday alone.

Big 7 Track Stars Beat Southwest

Kansas City, Kans., June 5 (U.P.). The powerful Big Seven Conference track and field champions, paced by record-breakers in the mile, 880 and the pole vault, swarmtd over the Southwest Conference squad in their third annual duel of champions last night. The score was 80-51.

After graduation comes opportunity!

THE approach of Commencement Day 1949, brings many high school seniors face to face with a big question — what next?

There's one big opportunity to which every high school graduate should give serious consideration. This is the career offered you in today's Regular Army.

Few openings in private enterprise offer you the leadership training, the educational advantages, the exciting travel and adventure, the supervised sports and recreation programs and the clean, wholesome, active life that can be yours with an Army enlistment.

Few openings offer you such comradeship with America's finest young men—for today—only the best are acceptable for service in the United States Army.

To win a place in today's Regular Army you must pass physical examinations that are tougher — mental examinations more difficult—than ever before. And with these more rigid requirements you will face keener all-'round competition for assignment to the more than 200 courses offered at Army technical and specialty schools.

The rewards are also greater —opportunity for advancement is limited only by your ability and initiative. Many of today's general officers began their careers as Privates. Some of today's Privates may be our future Generals!

Appointments to Officer's Candidate Schools and to the U. S. Military Academy at West Point are available to those who can make the grade. In what other field can you aspire so high?

You owe it to yourself to get all the facts. See the friendly recruiting officer at your local U. S. Army and U. S. Air Force Recruiting Station today. He will be happy to give you full details without any obligation to you.

Bosox Split With Tigers After McCarthy Scolding

Joe Demands More Hustle From Team

Detroit, June 5 (AP).—Manager Joe McCarthy cracked the whip on his Boston Red Sox today just before the Sox split a doubleheader with the Detroit Tigers. The Tigers won the nightcap 11-5 after losing the opener 5-3.

McCarthy read the riot act to his players in the dressing room Saturday after they blew a 7-1 lead over the Tigers and bowed 10 to 9 for their third loss in four starts on their present western invastion. McCarthy warned that curfew hours and other training regulations would be enforced and told his players he wanted a hustling club.

He repeated his warning just before today's first game. Homers by Ted Williams (his fourteenth) and Matt Batts produced victory for Joe Dobson, working with only one day's rest.

In the second game, the Tigers clubbed out 11 runs and 15 hits, including two home runs by outfielder Vic Wertz—his fifth and sixth.

Bucs Defeat Dodgers, 5-4, On Kiner's Hit

Brooklyn, June 5 (AP).—Ralph Kiner hit his thirteenth homer of the season into the left center field stands in the tenth inning today to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 5-4 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers. Murray Dickson, who pitched the last three innings, received credit for the victory to end his six-game losing streak.

Kiner's blow was struck off Rex Barney, who entered the game in the eighth inning with the bases loaded and none out. He pitched out of that spot allowing only one run on a fly by Wally Westlake, which tied the score. Dickson pitched the last three innings, letting the Dodgers down in order, for his second victory.

Giants Beat Reds, 6-1, Take Lead

New York, June 5 (AP).—Scoring five runs in the first inning on homers by Sid Gordon and Walker Cooper, the New York Giants breezed to a 6-1 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds today to take over first place. Jansen allowed the Reds four blows, one of them a four-bagger by Johnny Wyrostek.

The Giants started with a rush off Johnny Vander Meer in the first inning. Jack Lohrke singled and Gordon belted his tenth homer.

After Jansen walked and Lohrke singled in the second, Ewell Blackwell relieved Vander Meer. Lockman forced Lohrke and Gordon's fly scored Jansen. Kent Peterson and Jess Dobernic followed Blackwell and held the Giants scoreless the rest of the way.

Dick Foster Beats Billy Wolfe, 1 Up, for D. C. Schoolboy Golf Title

Coolidge Star Also Takes Medal Honor

By West McLean

Defending Schoolboy Champion Billy Wolfe went down to defeat before Dick Foster, 1 up, yesterday at Army-Navy.

Foster, Coolidge High student, was a finalist in last year's Washington Post schoolboy championships when he was defeated by Wolfe, 14-year-old sensation from Montgomery Hills Junior High.

Foster took the lead on the second hole with a birdie three but Wolfe evened the match on the sixth with an eagle three while Foster could only get a one under par four.

Foster went back in front on the eighth as Wolfe took a bogey four.

Wolfe, training one down at the turn, came on with a rush to take the tenth and eleventh holes with twin pars while Foster went over on both holes.

Wolfe went over on the twelfth and Foster took advantage of the slip to even the match.

Foster gained his final margin on the sixteenth where Wolfe was one over. Wolfe blew a chance to square the match on the seventeenth when he two-putted from about 15 inches.

Both had pars on the final hole.

Foster also won the medalist honors among the four schoolboys, shooting a 36, 40—76 today to go with his 78 of yesterday for a 154. Wolfe had a 38, 40—78 today and Billy Ball took 42, 42—84 while Ed Burnap had 47, 40—87.

Vandenberg Ties Rep. Smathers

The next to last foursome to tee off yesterday at Army-Navy was a perfect blend of youth and age. Playing together were Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg of the Air Force, Harry Parr, Freddie McLeod and Sandy Armour.

The heat proved too much for Sandy Armour, oldtime Scottish champ, and he dropped out after nine holes with a 42. The other oldtimer in this group, McLeod, Columbia pro and former National Open champ, finished with a 40, 41—81 for a two-day total of 155.

General Vandenberg shot a 41, 42—83 and two-day aggregate of 162 to tie with Representative George Smathers for the second slot in the official Washington class.

double, throwing the ball a mile over Robinson's head. Scala grounded to Dente, who chased Philley back to second and then uncorked a wild throw over Robinson's head, Philley going to third.

Robinson retrieved the errant toss and threw back to Dente to get Scala trying to make second. That was of little solace, however, as Appling slapped Hudson's first pitch into left field for a single to score Philley and that was enough for the White Sox, considering that Kuzava was to hold the Nats under the restraint.

When Scarborough muscled in on the scene in the eighth inning of the opener, things were in a rather sorry state for Kuhel's clan.

There were two out, but the bases were loaded and relief pitcher Forrest Thompson already had relieved the Nats of their 6-5 lead by walking in the tying run. In two pitches, Scarborough eased the tension as Joe Tipton hoisted his second offering to Vollmer in center field to quell that rally.

Scarborough Starts It Off

Scarborough took the situation in hand personally in the ninth, leading off by working Matt Surkont who was charged with the loss, for a walk. Yost offered no immediate help by fouling out, but Robertson lashed out his third hit, a single, and Scarborough raced all the way to third. As he pulled up at third, Surkont, the Sox's relief pitcher, was being pulled out in favor of Lefthander Clyde Shoun.

Stewart welcomed him to the premises by laying down as neat a bunt as you'll ever see and Scarborough streaked across with the winning run.

Joe Haynes, who drew his check from the Sox for eight seasons before joining father-in-law Griffith's club last winter, started for the Nats, but wasn't around after four and a third innings.

Haynes frittered away a 2-0 first inning lead and after he had issued his fifth walk in the fifth inning, he was excused in favor of Dick Welteroth.

Yost parked his homer in the left field bleachers in the sixth to tie the game at 3-3 for Welteroth, but a single by Earl Rapp scored two Chicago runs in the sixth and the Nats trailed, 5-3.

Robertson got one run back with his clout into the right field stands in the eighth and singles by Stewart, Robinson and Vollmer and Al Kozar's smash off starter Randy Gumpert's leg brought in three Nat tallies, and produced the one-run bulge which Thompson cast away in the same inning.

Idle tomorrow, the Nats shift over to Cleveland and begin operations against the sagging world champions Tuesday night. Mickey Haefner, an Indian tormentor of old, is scheduled to face Early Wynn.

The Haig Hits One for Son—Wrong Way

Walter Hagen, jr., promised his famous golfing father, the original Haig, that he could take the final putt yesterday at the National Celebrities Tournament at the Army and Navy Country Club.

So the junior partner of the golfing family of Hagen and Hagen toured the 6050-yard course in 36-34 with only the final putt to go for an even par.

At this point the Haig came into the act. Young Walter had driven the eighteenth green, but was a good 40 feet from the cup. His illustrous pop disdained to attempt the shot and ordered his son to approach the cup. Young Walter did.

Walter, jr., now left the green claiming, "He's going to ruin my score, you watch!"

The Haig approached the ball, walked around it, moved back, surveyed the roll of the green, went around the other side of the cup to see how the land lay over there, went up to the cup, pressed the grass at the lip of the cup down, came back to the ball, walked back to make sure of the roll and finally proceeded to address the ball.

The club came forward, the crowd held its breath, the club came back, the crowd sighed. The club came forward again, this time the ball was stroked deftly with all the old Haig accuracy.

The only mistake was that Haig had hit the ball on the backswing, leaving it about twice as far from the cup as it had previously been. Here, the Haig turned to his son and said, "Well, you take over now. I only wanted to make one putt." Walter, junior, holed out for a par round of 71.

Playing with Hagen, Chief Justice Fisher of Guam carded a 44, 46—90. That was pretty good golf for a man who hasn't touched a club in two years. Jimmy Nichols, the one-armed star, scored a 35, 37—72.

Bamby Bread and Northeast Body Works won their games in the City Unlimited League yesterday and are still tied for first place. Bamby won over Silver Spring Moose, 8-5, while Body Works downed Thrifty Liquors, 6-4. In other league games, the Southeast Merchants defeated Griffith Consumers, 11-8, and Howatt romped over Capital Cadillac, 18-3.

Squeeze Scores

Phils Beat Cubs, 7-2, Then Lose

Philadelphia, June 5 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs used the ancient but effective squeeze play to score a run in the top of the ninth inning and beat the Philadelphia Phillies 8 to 7, in the nightcap of a doubleheader at Shibe Park.

Hank Borowy pitched a five hitter and Del Ennis and Willie Jones blasted home runs to give the Phillies the opener, 7 to 2.

New $75,000 Jewish Center Is Dedicated In Rites Conducted by Rabbi Pickholz

Rabbi Morris Pickholz, spiritual leader of the Washington Highland's Jewish Center, yesterday dedicated a new brick center building at 141 Xenia st. sw. "to the love of God and the glory of Israel."

"May our center radiate peace, goodness, harmony and forgiveness," the rabbi said, at ceremonies officially opening the $75,000 structure, ground for which was broken on June 6, 1948.

Serves Over 200 Families

The building, open since April for services, serves more than 200 families in Anacostia, Congress Heights, Bellevue and Washington Highlands.

The ribbon crossing the entrance to the center was cut by Morris Dobschultz, 1917 N. Courthouse rd., Arlington, one of the founders of the center.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Simon, 3720 Nichols ave. se. were awarded the gold key, used to open the building officially, for their contribution to the center.

Senator Irving Ives (R., N. Y.) told the group that in a small way your undertaking and your problems here are symbolic of the problems in the establishment of the state of Israel."

The Rev. Richard B. Pursel, of the Congress Heights Presbyterian Church, told the audience of over 200 persons that "as a representative of the Christian community and of our own Congregational Church, I am happy to extend our congratulations and earnest good wishes for the work you can do . . . in making this a better community."

Sabath Urges Unity

Representative Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.) urged the congregation to maintain "harmony and unity."

Others who spoke at the dedication included: Louis E. Spiegler, executive director of the United Jewish Appeal; Irving Lustgarten, president of the Center; Pearl Frankle, president of the Women's Club; William Goldstein, president of Club 8; William Friedman, chairman of the building committee; Rabbi Isaac Tenlery, Congregation Anshe Kaminetz, New York City.

Cantor Simon Weiss, of B'nai Israel Synagogue, Rabbi Joshua Klavan, of Congregation Talmud Torah Southwest, and Rabbi Chaim Williamowski, also took part in the religious ceremony.

The Federal Diary

Intelligence Agency Is Rechecking Many Workers for Security

The super-secret Central Intelligence Agency is rechecking many of its employes. Half a dozen of its workers recently have been forced to resign because they were considered to be questionable security risks. CIA has the broadest possible authority to fire its employes.

GUN FACTORY: Employe leaders are talking about a spread-the work plan. The big naval establishment here is faced with a layoff of 2500 workers. Instead of the layoff, employes have suggested that the work week be reduced for all workers. Under present laws, Navy doesn't have the authority to shorten the work week.

FEDERAL SECURITY Administrator Oscar Ewing defines a Government official as "a man who is besieged by a mass of factual data and statistics."

RETIREMENT: Chairman Murray of the House Civil Service Committee, has requested a special rule on the bill to increase the benefits of employes who were retired before April 1, 1948. The bill would give these people full pensions under the new retirement act plus survivorship benefits for their widows.

WAR CLAIMS: This new commission will be composed of three $12,000-a-year members. The law doesn't require it to be bipartisan and the jobs are likely to go to Democrats. The GOP Eightieth Congress approved the bill to set up the agency. Its leaders were so confident of winning last year's election that they didn't take the precaution of writing a bipartisan provision in the law.

NAVAL COMMUNICATIONS: This center on Nebraska ave., is being militarized by the military. Its gates are locked half an hour before closing time. No civilian employe is allowed to leave his desk until the bell rings at closing time. The gates are opened a few minutes afterwards.

VA: About 160 employes will be fired at Veterans Administration's headquarters here as of June 30. They have already received notices. More than 100 others have been notified that they will be demoted a grade or more as of that date.

The reshuffling results from a reorganization of the construction supply and real estate division. A substantial number of additional employes here will be fired unless the Senate restores budget cuts voted by the House.

FIRINGS: Civil Service has under consideration a new plan to fire incompetent Federal workers with the minimum of red tape. It will recommend it to Congress soon. Details haven't been completed, but in general this is the proposal:

Say an employe was rated unsatisfactorily or judged to be incompetent in his Civil Service job. His agency would report his case to the Civil Service Commission. The commission would then transfer him to another job for which he seemed to be qualified. But if the employe was again rated unsatisfactory, he would be fired on the spot. He would have no appeal. The proposed plan would apply to all employes, veterans and nonveterans alike.

It's possible that the commission will agree to give the employe a third chance at another job before a firing order would be issued.

Coupled with the firing plan will be a proposal to strengthen staffs through both training and better direction from the top. A Government-wide promotion plan under which employes would be rewarded for outstanding work also will be sent to the Congress.

WAGE BOARD: The creation of a permanent board to make a study of Federal salaries and comparable rates of pay in private industry is being considered by the Senate Civil Service Committee.

The plan is to authorize the wage survey in the pay-reclassification bill that is being drafted by the Long Subcommittee. A score of witnesses who appeared before the Long group were quizzed on how Federal salaries compared with private wage rates. Committee members have expressed a desire for further details.

Boy, 16, Kills Man, Shoots 2 Others At Tavern

Youth Gets Away In Car Driven by Father Following Chapel Hill Slaying

One man was killed and two other persons wounded early yesterday when a 16-year-old boy ran amok at Mary Mason's Tavern, Chapel Hill, Md.

The dead man was Willie Ford, 19, a laborer of 9392 Old Fort rd., Chapel Hill. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Casualty Hospital, where he was taken by the Oxon Hill Rescue Squad.

His brother, Clarence Alvin Ford, 24, of the same address, was shot in the left arm and Mary Warrick, 24, a domestic, was shot in the right leg. She was hospitalized at Gallinger Hospital. Ford was released from Providence Hospital after a .38 caliber bullet was removed from his arm.

Arrives With Father

According to Prince Georges County Policemen C. L. Perrygo and Donald D. Forsht, the two Fords were standing in front of the tavern when the boy arrived in a car with his father.

Just what happened before the actual shooting, no witnesses could be found to clarify, but the boy started shooting and struck Willie in the heart. Alvin ran into the crowded tavern and into a side room, where several persons were also present. The boy fired several times into the room and struck Ford and the Warrick woman. He then fled in the car, with his father driving.

Hiding Out, Police Say

The father told police later that he did not know there had been any shooting and that he had been drinking. The boy left home immediately. Police said he had been hiding out, anyway, to avoid service of a bench warrant that had been issued for him in an earlier case. The nature of this charge could not be immediately learned, police said.

Policeman Perrygo said witnesses told him there was "bad blood" between the Fords and the boy prior to the shooting. He said he would swear out a warrant charging murder and sent a lookout over the police teletype system asking police of 13 States to look for the boy.

'Broken Spirit' Seen in Fight On Home Rule

Being deprived of citizenship privileges "breaks a person's spirit,' and accounts partly to opposition to home rule here, according to Mrs. John J. McClintock, president of the D. C. League of Women Voters.

Mrs. McClintock yesterday discussed the current home rule legislation over WOOK with Representative Walter K. Granger (D., Utah) and Wilbur S. Finch, president of the Central Suffrage Conference of D. C.

The broadcast was scheduled as a debate, with Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) to speak against home rule, but he was unable to attend. The participants were all in favor. Richard Eaton was moderator.

Blames Lack of Interest

Representative Granger said he believed all citizens should have the right to govern themselves, and blamed "lack of interest" on the part of both citizens and Congress as one of the main reasons that the District has not had the vote. Mrs. McClintock said this lack of interest, and actual opposition, of many citizens, came about partly "because they's never had the privileges of citizenship in the District." This lack, she said, is a 'very deliberating process which weakens a person's spirit."

Finch said an elected District city council "will do many things that long have been needed here," in such fields as education, hospitals and playgrounds.

Stresses Loan Provision

Representative Granger agreed with Mrs. McClintock that the provision of the home rule bill allowing the District to borrow money is a very important part of the legislation.

Under the present pay-as-you-go financing, it is impossible to set up sound building programs, he said.

Finch declared such problems as slums in the District would receive sympathetic consideration from District councilmen, who, thoroughly familiar with the District, might be able to solve such problems more satisfactorily than members of Congress who are not permanent residents.

Mrs. McClintock said home rule is desirable to relieve Congress of the burden of governing the District, because the citizens should have their democratic rights, and because it would provide an efficient and economical government for the District.

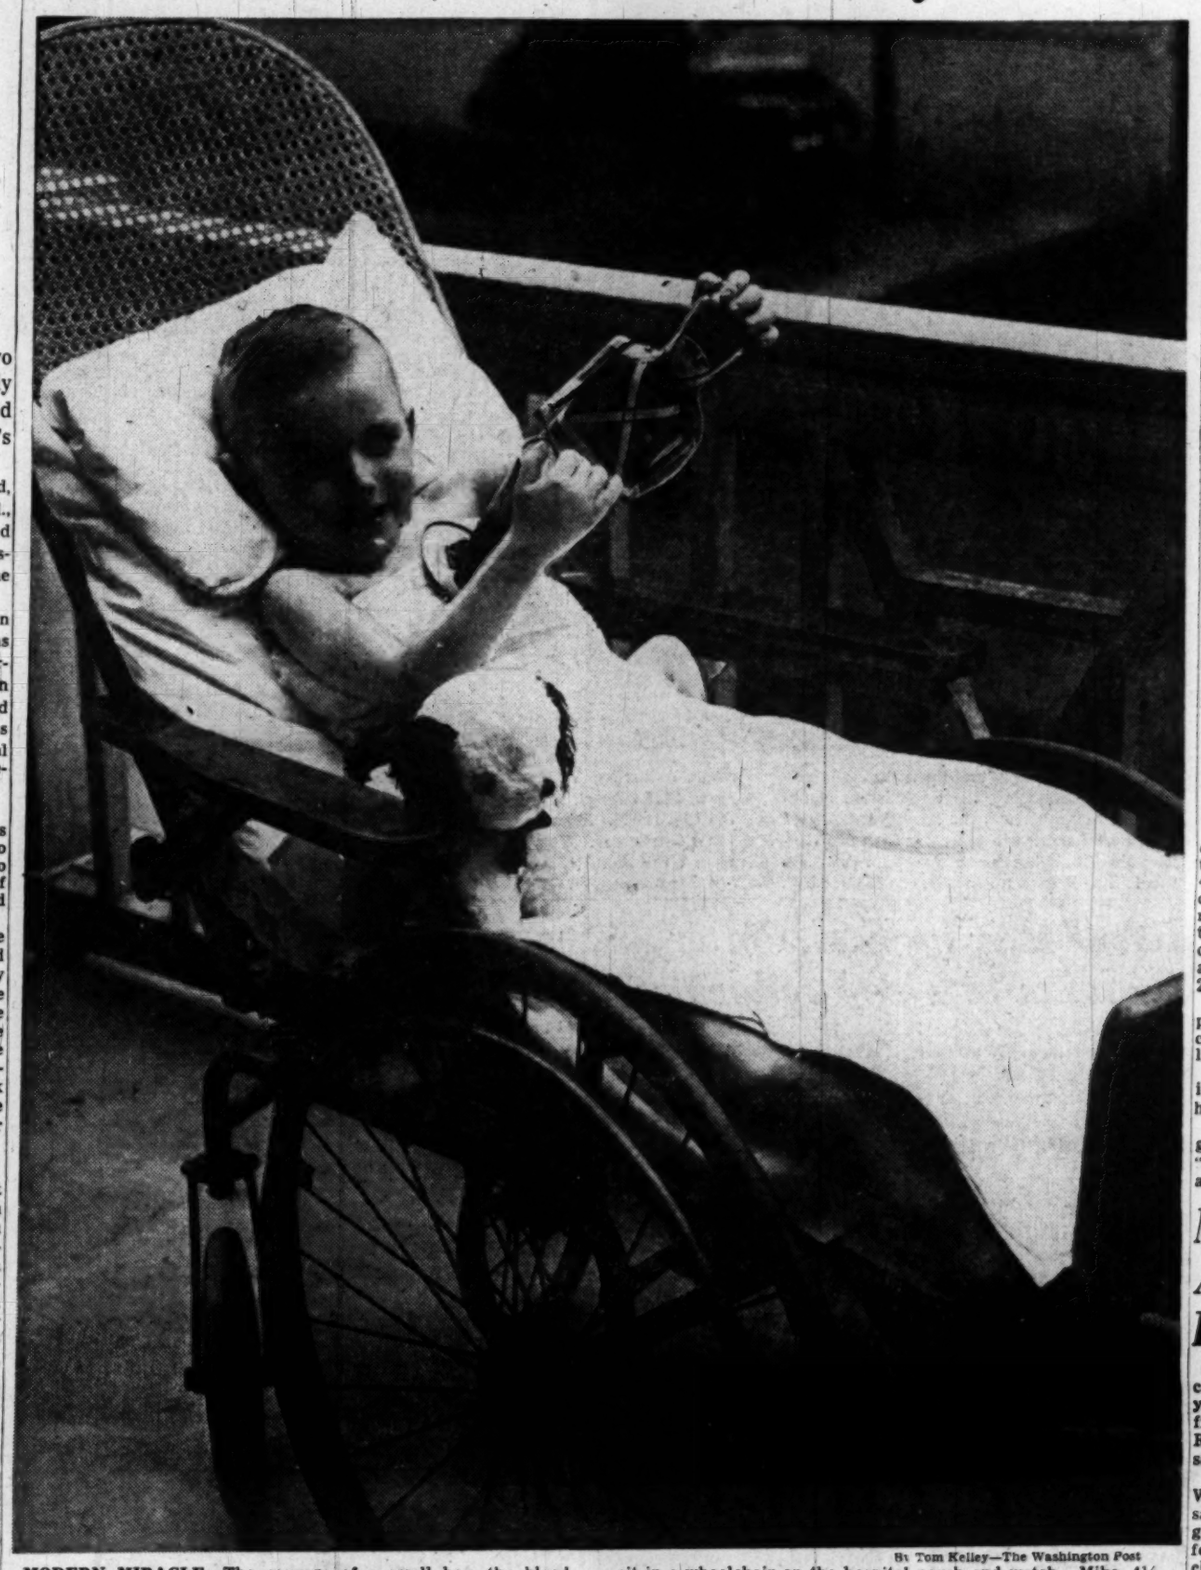
Mike Rector on Road to Recovery . . .



By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

MODERN MIRACLE—The courage of a small boy, the blood and skin and tears of the compassionate, the skilled medical care and the hope of thousands have brought burned little Michael Rector through. Already he can leave his bed for short periods, sit in a wheelchair on the hospital porch and watch. Mike, 4½, was burned over 70 per cent of his body last November 12. Barring complications he'll soon be walking, then playing again, thanks to a modern miracle

Four-year-old Michael Rector, the little fellow who was so badly burned last November 12 that he wasn't supposed to live, is going to make the grade.

This was the prediction yesterday of his physician, whose only qualification was "barring any unforseen complications."

He reported that the boy is sufficiently recovered from the blaze that seared the skin over 70 per cent of his body to sit up briefly in a wheelchair.

He disclosed, too, progress in another direction: Michael now is able to bear the weight of his body on his legs.

When they were dressing his burns the other day, the doctor said, they stood him up on the operating table. At that point, Michael took two steps, tottering and stiff-legged. Where it had been agony for him to stand before he felt little, if any, pain.

"He was frightened a bit, that's all," the physician reported.

Just how the boy was burned is undetermined. All his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Rector, know is that he ran home, at 613 Elliott st. ne., on November 12 screaming: "Mommy, I'm burning up."

Since then, he's had 17 skin-grafting operations—the last 13 without anesthesia. To seal the raw surfaces of his body, eight donors have contributed 544 square inches of skin. They'll wear scars the rest of their lives where the skin, in 4-by-8-inch patches, was peeled from their thighs.

Michael will undergo just one more skin-grafting operation, the doctor said. He needs "three or four" more of those 4-by-8 patches. They will be placed on his abdomen and both hips. "We have quite a list of donors," the doctor added.

The boy also is scheduled next week for a dip in the bathtub. The water, carefully adjusted to a temperature that agrees with him, will "help a great deal."

"It will stretch his muscles," the physician said.

He's just about ready to begin to learn how to walk again, too. That also comes next week.

Ahead of Michael Rector, however, is "a matter of months" before he'll be able to go home.

How does he spend his time?

"Well," said the physician, "he likes to receive mail. He likes candy. He likes to get packages. He opens every one himself."

5 Child Passengers, Woman Driver, Hurt When Car, Out of Control, Runs Into Tree

Three Girls Injured As Auto, 6 Aboard, Rams Telephone Pole

A mother smashed her car against a tree, injuring herself and five child passengers yesterday because one of the youngsters wanted to stand up in the front seat.

According to police, the automobile was driven by Mrs. Nathan L. Cohan, 29, of 6321 14th st. nw., who reported she lost control of the vehicle when she tried to make the child sit down.

The accident occurred at 16th st. and Fort Stevens dr. nw. None of the occupants was injured seriously.

Children's Injuries

Two of the children were daughters of Mrs. Cohan—Paula, 7, who suffered cuts and bruises, and Barbara, 12, who was bruised.

The other children were Elaine Pascal, 7, lacerations, and Michael Pascal, 13, a shoulder injury, both children of Mr. and Mrs. Jules Pascal, 3109 Northampton st. nw.; and Sharon Zeibert, 2, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Zeibert, 7930 16th st. nw., who suffered bruises.

Mrs. Cohan, who sustained bruises, and the children, were all treated at Walter Reed General Hospital nearby.

Mrs. Cohan told police she and the children were returning from a swimming outing at Indian Spring County Club, near Silver Spring, Md. The car was badly damaged.

Three to Hospital

Three Alexandria girls were severely injured early yesterday when the car in which they were riding struck a telephone pole on Columbia Pike near the Fairfax County line.

Admitted to Arlington Hospital were Grace Butler, 19, of 3313 King st., possible fracture pelvis; Mary Casey, 21, of 1600 W. Branch rd., broken right leg; Juanita Wanzer, 20, Seminary rd., broken shoulder.

Six other occupants of the car were treated for minor injuries at the hospital.

Arlington County police said the driver, Lucian Stanton, 27, 409 Oronoco st., Alexandria, told them he had been blinded by the lights of an approaching car, and swerved to avoid a collision.

In another early morning accident, William Boston, 39, of McLean, Va., suffered a possible fractured skull when his motorcycle overturned about 1 a. m. on Route 7, 2 miles west of Falls Church. He was admitted to Arlington Hospital in serious condition.

ACCIDENT—This is what happened when Mrs. Nathan L. Cohan, of 6321 14th st. nw., lost control of her car while trying to make one of five youngsters in the car sit down, police said

Death of Kent Called a Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday in the death of Morton E. Kent, a Chevy Chase business executive, whose body was found Saturday, his throat deeply slashed, in the Potomac River above Key Bridge.

Kent, a Harvard graduate and former Government and UNRRA employe, had been export manager for an office equipment company, but recently lost his position. His wife told police he had been depressed since that time.

Ideal Father Contest Lists More Entries

Mrs. Charles R. Schmidt of 2614 41st st. nw. thinks her husband, who "has taken the hardest job possible, that of raising another man's child," is the "Ideal Father of 1949."

"Like many GIs, he is an average fellow, working days and going to school evenings," writes Mrs. Schmidt in her letter nominating her husband in The Post's Ideal Father Contest.

"Love and Devotion"

"My son's father died before he was born, and my present husband has shown nothing but love and devotion for the child. I am so proud of both of them," she says.

Mrs. Irving Berman, wife of the medical director of the U. S. Government Printing Office, is sure she has an ideal father in her family, too.

"When offered a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for study abroad he turned it down—to remain with our 7-year-old daughter Linda whom he felt needed him," writes Mrs. Berman.

"He doesn't know we have nominated him—but I think he knows how much we appreciate him," she concludes.

Make Your Entry Now

If you have a perfect dad in your family—or know of a father you think fills the bill—enter him now in the Post's Ideal Father contest.

Deadline for contest entries is June 16. The winning father will be interviewed on Father's Day, June 19, by Hazel Markel over WTOP, will be treated to a gala dinner and show, with his family. There'll be a special plaque for him, too.

Letters should be addressed to the Ideal Father Editor, The Washington Post, Washington, 4, D. C.

New Ministers Named in Area By Methodists

Hamline Church's Pastorate Open; Selection Expected During Summer

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Westminster, Md., June 5.—New ministers were named here tonight to the pulpits of Washington area Methodist churches by Bishop Charles W. Flint.

Left open, however, was the pastorate of Hamline Methodist Church, 16th and Allison sts. nw., one of the largest Methodist churches in Washington.

Retirement of Dr. H. W. Burgan, Hamline's pastor for the past 18 years, was announced earlier during the 165th annual session of the Baltimore Annual Conference of the Methodist Church at Western Maryland College here.

Meeting Takes 4 Days

Speculation on who would be appointed to fill the vacancy has been high during the four-day meeting. Bishop Flint is expected to appoint a minister to the church during the summer.

The Rev. J. E. Kemp Horn, pastor of Harlem Park Methodist Church in Baltimore since 1941, was named pastor of Epworth Methodist Church, 13th st and North Carolina ave. ne.

He succeeds the Rev. James Dudley, who has been at Epworth since 1945 and who will go to Harlem Park Church.

New minister of Union Methodist Church, 814 20th st. nw., will be the Rev. Edward Lewis, who has been pastor of Rock Creek Forest Chapel. He succeeds the Rev. S. K. Cockrell, who is retiring after seven years at Union.

Others Are Named

The Rev. Wesley Dodge was named to the pulpit of Rockville Methodist Church to succeed the Rev. John Rosenberger, who also is retiring. The Rev. Mr. Rosenberger, who has been at the Rockville church since 1937, will serve as pastor of Buckeystown (Md.) Methodist Church.

Other pastoral changes announced at the final session of the conference were:

Wet Saturday

Cells Bulge With Zealous Imbibers

Mixtures of blithe summer spirits and liquid spirits left "standing room only" at downtown police stations early yesterday.

Patrol wagons were kept busy, shuttling filled-up prisoners from filled-up cell blocks downtown to outlying stations which were less jammed.

Sunday, daylight came before the crowding ceased. By that time, the sobering-up period had passed for many imbibers. They posted collateral, or telephoned relatives or friends.

At the height of the jaffic tram—beg pardon—jilled-up fails—Central Station and No. 1 cell bulge was blocking, that is, block was bulging, with 96 prisoners, and sending new arrivals elsewhere.

No. 2 Precinct packed 35 prisoners into 10 cells and transported ten others to outlying clinks. No. 4 put 18 into eight coops, No. 5 did likewise, then stirred three more from another precinct into the human cocktail. No. 6 had only three arrests, but accepted a dozen guest prisoners. At No. 9, 29 were squeezed into eight cells.

Public behavior in the other precincts apparently was more decorous. There was even room to lie down in the cages.

Police wouldn't venture an opinion as to the reason for this alcoholic congestion.

"Just summer coming on, I guess," said one veteran officer. "Just a move massment, I mean a psycolalcol phemono—Oh, nuts!"

Man, 79, Lives After Plunge From Bridge

A 79-year-old man was in critical condition at Gallinger Hospital yesterday as result of a plunge from Key Bridge into the Potomac River about 7:30 a. m. Doctors said he suffered from shock.

Police identified him as Frank Watkins, 824 20th st. nw. They said he laid his coat, hat and glasses on the bridge about 200 feet from the District end before climbing over the guard rail.

Three men who were waiting on the shore nearby to rent boats for fishing, heard a shout that Watkins had jumped. They seized the nearest boat, rowed out, and pulled him from the water. The three were Logan Kline, 3600 K st. nw.; Eugene C. Sauer, 2822 Devenshire st. nw., and his son, George E. Sauer, 7025 Strathmore st., Bethesda.

Police said so far as they can learn, Watkins' only relative is a sister in Fairmount, W. Va. They were attempting to contact her.

New Window Is Dedicated At Cathedral

Washington Cathedral's new Prayer Book Window was dedicated yesterday by the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington, in ceremonies at the cathedral.

More than 400 persons witnessed the dedication. It was a highlight in the two-day commemoration of the 400th anniversary of publication of the first Episcopal Book of Common Prayer.

Set in the west wall of the cathedral's north transept, the stained glass Gothic window traces symbolically the history and development of the prayer book since Edward VI ordered it into use, in English, in 1549.

In a sermon preceding the dedication, the Rev. Roscoe T. Foust, rector of the Church of the Ascension, New York, took the windows as his text, outlining the reason for the presence of each figure in it.

The window is the gift of Mrs. Charles Hamilton Maddox, of 2446 Belmont rd. nw., in memory of her parents, Cora Hull Ramage and Samuel Young Ramage.

At cathedral services yesterday morning, the Rev. Powel M. Dawley, professor of ecclesiastical history at General Theological Seminary, New York, spoke on the Book of Common Prayer. Part of the service was read from a first edition.

Professor Dawley is to address members of the Washington Clericus at 1:30 p. m. today in the concluding session of the two-day observance.

He will speak on "Archbishop Cranmer—Principles of Prayer Book Revision, What They Were and How They Are Applicable Today." A panel discussion and question-and-answer period will follow.

"I almost did once before," the Rev. Dowdy said, "but at the last minute the Rev. Mr. Pruden arrived from out of town."

The Rev. Edward Hughes Pruden, the pastor, is returning from the Northern Baptist Convention in San Francisco. Last night he was to preach the baccalaureate service at the University of Kansas, Lawrenceville.

Miss Margaret Truman accompanied her father to the 9:45 a. m. communion service yesterday. The Rev. Mr. Dowdy's subject was "This Is the Fellowship," and his text, "You are the Body of Christ," taken from First Corinthians, 12:27.

Leslie E. Lane Water Colors On View Here

"Lands of Rest," a group of watercolors by Leslie E. Lane will be on exhibit during the month of June at the Federal Security Agency Building, daily, from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m., except Saturday and Sunday. The exhibit is sponsored by the Department of the District of Columbia of the American Legion.

Each painting depicts an American cemetery in the European theater in which lie the country's heroes. One is the Essonne Valley at Villeneuve-sur-Auvers, France, another a panoramic view at Fosses, Belgium, and a third, the Moselle Valley at Epinal, France. In all, there are 41 paintings.

The idea for the series came to Leslie Lane while he was painting a watercolor of one of the valleys of the Seine River. He realized he was on the lawns of the World War II American Cemetery of Villeneuve-sur-Auvers. Impressed by the peace and serenity of the cemetery, it occurred to him how much the parents of the American soldiers resting there would like to be in his place. It was then that he decided to travel through the American cemeteries of Europe painting each one in its particular setting. On completion he planned to exhibit the paintings to American parents and families who were unable to make this pilgrimage.

The artist was born in England, and his father, John Edmund Lane, was a noted sculptor. Leslie Lane is now an American citizen. He is married to a French girl and lives in a former studio of Matisse in the old section of Montmartre.

Mr. and Mrs. Lane made the pilgrimage of the cemeteries in a jeep, facing constant difficulties in war-torn Europe. Roads were in bad repair, fuel was scarce and food hard to obtain. They found the cemeteries, however, were always beautifully landscaped and cared for.

Two years ago, when Jefferson Caffery was Ambassador to France, he visited the exhibit and said: "Much of the pain to those who lost sons or fiances or husbands in the last war comes from the fact that they imagine the spots where their loved ones lie buried as a torn and tortured country, where exists no peacefulness appropriate to their final resting place. The warm canvasses of Mr. Lane may help somewhat to correct false impressions . . ."

How to Remove Scorch From Wool

Would you tell me how a scorched spot can be removed from a wool shirt? The spot is on the right side of the shirt.
P. J. C.

You may be able to lighten the stain somewhat, but scorched wool can seldom be returned to its original condition. Sometimes rubbing the scorch with emory paper will remove enough of the scorched surface fibers to improve the appearance. Or, if the shirt is white you can dampen the stained area and dust powdered sodium perborate over it. Rub between the fingers so the perborate penetrates the fabric and let stand for an hour. Rinse thoroughly. If this lightens, but does not completely remove the stain the treatment may be repeated.

Sodium perborate is a bleach but if the shirt is colored you might try it on an inconspicuous spot. If it does not affect the color you can use it on the scorch as described above.

To N. N., H. M. and A Reader who have asked for instructions for painting a fiber rug:

Clean rug thoroughly from both sides with a vacuum cleaner or a stiff broom. If the rug is very soiled it should be shampooed with a rug shampoo using a stiff brush, working in circular motions over only a small area at a time. Thoroughly rinse each section after it is shampooed by wiping with a clean cloth wrung out of clear water. Allow to dry.

When dry, place several layers of newspapers under the rug if the work is being done on the floor and apply one or two coats of a good grade flat floor paint thinned with one-fourth as much turpentine. Use an old inexpensive brush to apply the paint and work it well into the fibers of the rug. Be sure rug is thoroughly dry before it is used.

Can you tell me how to set my table when I serve lunch to six of my friends. What kind of cloth can I use? What is a simple lunch to prepare?

I'd suggest a gaily colored lunch cloth which will completely cover the table. Under it use a cloth or felt table pad to give a softer surface and prevent the cloth from slipping.

A simple lunch could consist of chicken or sea food salad in tomato cups, potato chips and hot muffins or rolls. For dessert nothing could be nicer than a strawberry shortcake topped with whipped cream and coffee or ice tea.

How can I remove a stain from a bleached mahogany table caused by a lamp pad made of red plastic fabric, the kind used for upholstering furniture? In replacing the lamp on the stained part, some of the green felt from the bottom of the lamp stuck to the spot. The original finish has not been removed by the plastic fabric. M. R.

Probably the red stain has penetrated the finish into the wood and only way it can be completely removed is to remove the finish, bleach the stained area and refinish the table top. However, you might try vigorously rubbing the stained area with a cloth moistened with liquid rubbing and cleaning wax. This will remove any wax present and with it any red dye which might be in it. The wax should also remove the green felt fuzz which is stuck to the wood. If the wax doesn't remove the fuzz, rub it with powdered pumice and oil. When the stain and felt fuzz have been removed, keeping a thin, well-rubbed layer of wax on the furniture at all times should help to protect it in the future from similar accidents.

Woman Says Marriage Is Failing Because Her Husband Is Hardly Ever on Time for Anything; Habitual Tardiness for Dinner Is Last Straw

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like your opinion of a situation that is slowly breaking up our marriage. The situation is this: My husband is seldom on time for anything; but it is his lateness for supper that annoys me most.

We have a maid who comes in at noon, cleans and gets dinner. When my husband is late, which is three-fourths of the time, the maid is delayed in finishing her work, which I feel is unfair to her. Moreover, our small son, who is 6, gets cross and difficult waiting for his food.

Frequently, too, Frank will telephone at dinner time, saying that he has just looked at the clock and can't make it for dinner. Naturally his portion of dinner is all cooked by then and consequently is often wasted. Since he is his own boss, I feel that he can and should regulate his time.

We have already made our dinner-hour later than formerly, but he gets home all the later. Can you explain this to me from a psychological viewpoint? Am I wrong in allowing myself to take it seriously? I might add that Frank was late before marriage, too.
A. B.

Selfishly Blind to Man's Problem

DEAR A. B.: As the wife of a man who is seldom on time for anything, you lack the psychological acumen to count the blessings you have, and to give him the credit that is his due.

You say that Frank is his own boss, meaning that he either heads his own business or does executive or professional work, and is paid on the basis of intelligence, not "man-hours." Also you are fully supported, I gather; not a wage-earning helpmeet but a housewife who stays home, with a cook-helper to handle the drudgery. In short, you are comfortably fixed, economically.

So what?—you may sniff. What's special about that? To which I say, it is evidence of pretty solid performance, pretty fine delivery in the way of "good living" provided dependents, on the part of a person who struggles habitually against unconscious "conditioned" resistance to routine demands on him.

Habitual tardiness is, I believe, partially a symptom of outraged, deeply repressed protest against exhausting insatiable demands made on the personality in formative years; and partially an end-result of being consistently thwarted in early life,—as, for example, by a nagging perfectionist parent who is always after the child to do this, that and the other thing, and "do as I say," never giving him room to be himself, whether in eating, dressing, playing; nor a voice in deciding when to rest, etc.

Insight Into His Behavior

THAT KIND of bossing is no help whatever in giving the child primary habit-training in meeting situations intelligently, with foresight, on his own initiative. Consequently, as he grows up his address to life is mostly defensive, in the sense that events, individuals and the element of time seem always to be "pushing" him.

He is negatively geared to all he does, on the unconscious theory that environmental pressure is the indisputable master of his pace, which drives and to which he sluggishly responds; as if he recognized no inner authority, no self-regulating capacity to be boss of his time and make it serve him pleasurably. And that explains your husband, I think.

If my inference is correct, your self-centeredness is a replica of his mother's, probably, hence no inducement to him to hurry home to a replica of the "demands" that got him off on the wrong foot to start. To save the marriage, get firsthand psychological instruction on how to adapt constructively to his obscure distress; and as a by-product of this mature endeavor, you may begin to love maturely, and thereby heal old injuries done him. naturally different
Yes, a clam and an oyster look somewhat alike. But would you want them called by the same name on the menu? Of course not!
Why, then, should two radically different textile fibers be sold to you as one and the same thing—"rayon"? These two fibers may look alike to you in fabrics—but they won't behave alike after you buy them! They differ in almost every quality of importance to you as a consumer . . . in resistance to soiling, in ease of washing, in the way they iron, in their ability to stay in press, in draping qualities, in resistance to shrinkage, and so on.
To avoid blind buying, urge your retailer to call these fibers by different names—to identify one as rayon, and the other as estron—as recommended by the American Society for Testing Materials.
To receive a free picture book that shows you in photographs of actual tests the differences between these two man-made fibers, just pencil your name and address on this ad, and return it to us.
You will find the booklet—"The Tag that Tells the Consumer—WHAT?"—a help in buying fabrics and clothing.

Edward R. Kearney, a Western High School student, has earned his choice of scholarships at two universities.

Kearney, who lives at 2442 Huidekoper pl. nw., is winner of a Lehigh University competitive regional scholarship worth $2800 for a four-year education, the university announced last night.

The Righ Rev. P. J. McCormick, rector of Catholic University, announced that Kearney has won a half scholarship for study in the College of Arts and Sciences, or the School of Engineering and Architecture.

The Lehigh spokesman said Kearney plans to enroll there in September and major in mechanical engineering. Another Washingtonian, Chandra S. Ram, 3315 Ross pl. nw., has won a Lehigh half-free tuition scholarship valued at $300 a year, it was announced.

Father McCormick also disclosed awarding of four other Catholic University scholarships.

The full War Memorial scholarship goes to John McGonegal, 4524 South Dakota ave. ne., a student at the Priory School, for study in the College of Arts and Sciences or the School of Engineering and Architecture.

Winning half scholarships for study in either of the two schools are Elton Herman, 1313 North Capitol st., McKinley High School; Lawrence Beaubien, 703 Jackson st., West Falls Church, Gonzaga High School; and John Burgoyne, 5015 Nevada ave. nw., Gonfiaga High.

Named as alternates are Thomas Herbert, 460 Mellon st. sw., and John Cronin, 3713 Warren st. nw., both Gonzaga High; and Thomas Scott, 3318 17th st. ne., McKinley High.

The Right Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen told Catholic University's graduates at baccalaureate services yesterday that their vocation in life was to be loyal to their country and to their religion.

"If you are true to the Word of God, you need have no fear for the future," he said at the campus service.

The service included a procession of graduates in cap and gown and members of the faculty in academic costume from McMahon Hall to the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

A solemn mass was celebrated by the Rev. John M. Walsh, dean of men, assisted by the Rev. James Hogan, S.S., and the Rev. Francis Murray, S.S., of the Theological College, as deacon and subdeacon, respectively. The Gregorian music was sung by the De La Salle College choir, directed by Brother Michael and with Brother Alben at the organ.

Class day ceremonies will be held at 4 p. m. Tuesday in the University Theater. The principal speaker will be Lewis L. Guarnieri of Warren, Ohio, the alumni member of the university's board of trustees.

Wednesday at 11 a. m. in the gymnasium the 1190 graduates will be given their degrees by the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington and chancellor of the university. Good Use of Power Held Man's Problem

The basic problem of the 20th century is the constructive use of power, the Rev. Robert E. Lee, pastor, told 56 members of the graduating class of Montgomery County Junior College at baccalaureate services yesterday at St. Luke's Lutheran Church, Silver Spring, Md.

"Taken as a whole, this generation has abandoned faith in God and as a result has lost faith in man," he said, in pointing out that whether power is used constructively or destructively "depends upon what you put your faith in."

Graduation exercises for the college will be held June 10 at Leland Junior High School.

Humans Dependent Priory Class Told

Graduates of Priory School, 14th st. and South Dakota ave. ne., at commencement exercises in the school auditorium yesterday, were told that there is a false view of human independence in today's largely un-Christian society.

The speaker, the Right Rev. Herbert Byrne, O.S.B., said, "Man is not independent. It is his glory and strength, the source of all his worth and dignity and of his 'rights' that he is independent."

Abbot Byrne, who is abbot president of the English Congregation of the Order of St. Benedict, has just finished a six-week tour of the United States and is returning to England this week.

Liberals Lead In Colombia

Bogota, Colombia, June 5 (AP).—Fragmentary returns from today's congressional elections gave the Liberal Party a slight but inconclusive lead.

The first 25 communities reporting from 10 of the 15 departments (states) gave the Liberals 32,132 and the Conservatives 30,768.

The early returns did not include the larger cities, expected to give the Liberals a big advantage.

However, among the early returns was Tunja, capital of Boyaca Department, which went Conservative after giving the Liberals a majority in 1947.

The Conservatives also showed gains in Antioquia Department, their stronghold, and in three communities in Cundinamarca Department, which has been overwhelmingly Liberal.

Despite the hotly contested campaign, the balloting was completed quietly and without incident.

High Court May Rule on Segregation

By the United Press

Can equal education be provided if races are segregated in the schools?

The Supreme Court may announce today whether it will settle that question. Its answer, which would not come until next year, could affect 17 States and the District of Columbia, where whites and Negroes are prohibited by law from attending the same schools.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, aided by other groups interested in ending segregation, has built a test case for the Supreme Court.

It involves Heman Marion Sweatt, Houston, Tex., Negro, who tried to enter the University of Texas Law School in Austin three years ago. When he was refused admission because of his color, he filed suit to force the school to enroll him.

Since then Texas has established a new State university for Negroes at Houston, and plans to build a $250,000 law school building. Nevertheless, Sweatt refuses to attend the school which is limited to members of his race.

He carried his appeal to the United States Supreme Court after the Texas Supreme Court upheld findings by two lower State courts that a temporary law school for Negroes at Austin offered him "substantially equal" opportunities.

"The record in this case, the record in similar cases, governmental and private studies," Sweatt's petition said, "demonstrate clearly that separate Negro facilities are never equal to the facilities established for other groups. The Negro school is invariably an inferior school."

Sailors Slug Man, Take Watch and $5

A 26-year-old man told police two sailors slugged and robbed him last night after he refused them cigarettes. He was treated for head injuries at George Washington University Hospital.

The man, Curtis E. Ramsey, 1225 L st. nw., said the two men approached him at the corner of 22nd and I sts. nw. at about 9:30 p. m. and as he turned away one of them knocked him to the ground. He said they took his wrist watch and $5.

Truman Pens Name 600 Times Every Day (While Resting)

President Truman signs his name about 600 times a day, his press secretary, Charles G. Ross, disclosed yesterday.

To get through this tedious job every day without having waiting papers pile up, the President uses every possible spare moment for this signature work, Ross said.

In fact, he would never be able to finish the 600 autographs daily if it weren't for the fact that he has William J. Hopkins, his executive clerk, act as a watchdog during the 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. period when he sees callers, the press secretary explained.

When Hopkins sees a caller come out of the President's office a minute or two before the allotted 15 minutes is up, he rushes in with a stack of documents. Mr. Truman is ready for him with his pen.

These and other details of the President's day were told by Ross, a schoolmate of Mr. Truman's in the class of 1901 at the Independence, Mo., High School, during an interview yesterday with Dr. Tomlinson D. Todd, director of the Americans All program, over WOOK.

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny

This morning, I visited Mrs. Evans to see if she had any old clothes for next week's rummage sale. A few minutes after I got there, little Charlie Evans came running into the house with tears streaming down his face. He'd been playing ball and had hurt his finger quite badly.

Mrs. Evans' telephone party line was in use at that moment, but when she explained that she wanted to make an emergency call, the party who was talking gave up the line at once. Then Mrs. Evans called the doctor, who said he'd be right over.

To me, this example of telephone courtesy and understanding brought home the importance of sharing our party lines. I think that when everyone on the line is thoughtful and considerate, it makes the service more useful and pleasant all the way around.

To Make Senate Plea

New York, June 5 (AP).—About 200 American Jewish Congress delegates from 20 States will go to Washington Monday to urge a Senate investigation of "the collapse of denazification," the Congress said today.

One on the Aisle—

M. Sartre's 'Chips' Intriguing Film

By Richard L. Coe

"THE CHIPS ARE DOWN," at the Dupont, is an original, diverting film, the first Jean-Paul Sartre musings to reach American screens.

The theme is one of those after-death-what ideas which occasionally beguille filmsters—"Outward Bound," "Here Comes Mr. Jordan" and "Stairway to Heaven" reminding one that such a voyage is not unique.

It is, I suppose, something of an illustrated lecture on M. Sartre's famed Existentialism, which seems to boil down to the idea that what happens to you is pretty well taped in advance.

The film gets underway slowly with two totally dissimilar story threads. Their merger is rather boldly prolonged, a daring device, but effective. In one part of a village an insurrection leader is ambushed by a spy shortly before the time of a planned revolt. In an elegant part of town a beautiful woman is being poisoned by her husband, who has his heart set on her fortune and her pretty sister.

Checking in at the After Life Registry, the two discover that death consists of living in the haunts of one life, unseen, unfelt, but fully aware of everything on earth. The man and woman meet, fall in love, bemoan the fact that theirs can be no sensual romance, that they did not ever meet while living.

Once more they find themselves before the registry clerk. There has been a mistake, she tells them. They were supposed to have had the chance to meet and fall in love in their lifetimes. They will be allowed to go back to life and if, 24 hours later they still love each other more than their associations, they may live out their lost lives together.

Excellently Acted

Now we are back at the moment each was supposed to have died, but they have the knowledge of after death. They know they must live only for each other, but before the 24 hours have passed, their natural ties and associations have kept them apart. Despite their awesome knowledge, death once more is preordained. Even had they lived, they would have died.

Such a story is inherently ironic and Director Jean Delannoy has shrewdly hewn to this tone. Micheline Presle, an actress now at work in Hollywood, and Marcel Pagliero, who appeared in Italy's "Open City," are both excellent in their strange assignments. She is, indeed, an effortless player, bringing the touch of humanity to a conceivably outlandish role.

Outstanding as the precise keeper of the Hereafter's books is the late Marguerite Moreno. This veteran of the French stage created Giraudoux's "The Madwoman of Chaillot" and you'll relish her keen style as she satirizes those countrywomen of hers one has seen ruling offices and shops. And you'll be amused by her cat, a minor adroit creature.

"THE CHIPS ARE DOWN." Lopert Films release produced in Paris by Filmsonor. Screen play and dialogue by Jean-Paul Sartre and Jacques Laurent Bost from a novel by Sartre. Photographed by Christian Matras. Music by Georges Auric. Directed by Jean Delannoy. At the Dupont.

"The Chips Are Down" is not for those who take life literally, but it will beguile those who enjoy chewing on prickling ideas, always a screen novelty.

SATURDAY NIGHT'S Art Godfrey Homecoming at the Armory was one more example of how badly this city needs an auditorium suitable for such functions . . . The Armory puts both the paying public and the performers on the spot . . . The acoustics are rough on both audience and players, who, when they're singing hear themselves twice, their accompaniment rarely . . . The CBS crew and the inevitably faithful Capitol Theater set did everything possible to make the platform a workable stage, but the dice are always loaded against them . . . The traditional generosity of theater folk must get mightily strained when it comes to putting on a show in a city which offers virtually no facilities.

THE TRANS-LUX schedules a "twofer" tonight, with "Portrait of Jenny" going on the screen for the last time at 8:30 and with advance showing of "Tulsa" scheduled for 7 and 10 o'clock.

Truman Urged To Give FEPC Top Priority

NYHT News Service

Representatives of two major labor groups and spokesmen for national Negro and Jewish organizations have made a personal appeal to the White House to urge that fair employment practices legislation be given a top priority in civil rights legislation.

The appeal, it was learned yesterday, was made last week at a secret meeting here, at which the President was represented by Clark M. Clifford, his special counsel.

Its effect was to tell the Administration that the leading advocates of civil rights legislation want the President to urge his congressional leaders to face up to the civil rights fight by calling up what is expected to be the toughest measure to pass.

This would by-pass for the present legislation making poll taxes and lynching illegal by Federal statute.

Joining in the representations were James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO; Lewis Hines, legislative director of the AFL; Joseph L. Rauh, jr., chairman of the executive committee of Americans for Democratic Action; George A. Weaver of the CIO Committee to Abolish Discrimination; Walter White, national director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Shad Poliere, executive vice-president of the American Jewish Congress, who also represented other Jewish groups.

Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (Dem., Minn.), chairman of A.D.A., also was present.

The Senate, stymied by the Southern filibuster at the beginning of the session, has made no further move toward advancing any civil-rights legislation. In the House, however, the Labor Subcommittee last Thursday unanimously approved a bill to create a permanent Federal fair employment practices commission.

Briton in Poland Renounces Citizenship

Warsaw, Poland, June 5 (AP).—George Chandos Bidwell, head of the British Council in Poland, has renounced his British citizenship to become a Pole, the official press agency said today. It quoted him as saying "the British way of life has been sold out to American dollars."

TURNABOUT

Mrs. Harry McClain of McLean, Va., adds an interesting thought to our discussion of women's hats.

She realizes that women who don't remove their lids at the movies often block the view of those behind them.

But she wonders whether men realize that they do the same thing at a ball game.

Mrs. McClain reports that she attended the Memorial Day doubleheader at Griffith Stadium and saw only about half of the action at home plate—because the men in front of her kept their hats on. As she puts it:

"It's a good thing they played a doubleheader, because with 50 per cent of my view cut off I managed to see about 9 innings of play."

CELEBRITIES GOLF TOURNAMENT SIDELIGHTS

The weatherman gave the official high temperature as "82 degrees." He must have taken it while sitting under a big umbrella, sipping a long, cold drink.

After teeing off on Number 5, Bing Crosby brushed past a hero-worshipping bobby soxer who thereupon exclaimed to her companions: "Look! This finger touched Bing. I ain't gonna wash it for a year."

On the second hole, Bing and Sam Snead were both off the green, about equally distant from the cup. Snead said, "Go ahead, Bing; you're away." Crosby bowed with mock solemnity, and said, "No, you have a go, Sambo. I want to see how fast this green is."

"I'll show you exactly how fast it is," said Sam — and with that he chipped to within 4 feet of the hole. (P.S.: He missed the putt.)

When Snead's approach dug in a yard from the flag on No. 5 (he canned that putt) Crosby muttered: "Hey, Sambo —you're a pretty desperate hillbilly, aren't you?"

On the next hole, Bing was off to the left of the green, in trouble. But he laid a beauty right on the stick—whereupon Sam yowled: "What'd ya do, throw it up here?"

On the seventh, Snead was worried about hitting into the gallery, and asked the soldiers to move the crowd back.

Then he belted his drive 290 yards, straight as a string, and all uphill. When he pitched on and rammed home his putt, Bing muttered: "Man, you're rough."

Bing missed an 18-inch putt on the ninth, and Snead grinned from ear to ear. That's supposed to be his specialty.

On the twelfth, Happy Chandler's approach went over the green and rolled toward some newsreel cars parked on the far side. "Hey, you'll have to move your car if it goes under," yelled a competing newsreel man.

"Nuts to that," growled the first cameraman. He reached down, caught the ball, and tossed it back to the apron of the green.

When Chandler came puffing up, he was mighty pleased with his lie. "I'd have sworn it went over," he mused.

Snead tried a 35-foot putt on the thirteenth, and just missed by 18 inches. Nonchalantly walking over to pick the ball up, he called out "Thank you, Bing." "Hey," yelled Crosby, "I'll give it to you, but wait until I do before you thank me."

Snead played the par 5 fifteenth with a driver and an 8-iron. "That's what makes him a champ," muttered a spectator. "He makes the game look easy."

When Crosby picked up and failed to play out the seventeenth, I asked General Vandenberg how to score it. "Chandler was high with a six," he said, "so give Bing a seven."

"You're ruining me, man," groaned Der Bingle. "Can't you compromise on a six?" It went into the records as a six.

When I got back to the office, some of the late foursomes were still finishing their rounds. Bill Ahlberg, in the "slot" on the sports desk, was yowling for copy from the staff, because the deadline for the bulldog edition was fast approaching.

At that point his telephone rang, and a female voice on the other end said: "I would like to know all the scores in the golf tournament."

"So would I, lady," murmured Bill wearily. "So would I."

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Speaking of the celebrities, Mrs. Maurice Malin of 310 Hamilton st. nw. calls Arthur Godfrey: "The barefoot boy with cheek."

SALES TAX

Oh, listen to our tale of woe;
Oh, hear us scream and holler.
We soon will have to pay a tax
Of 2 cents on the dollar.

The reason that some of us get
So hot around our collars
Is that, although we've got 2 cents,
We're slightly short of dollars.

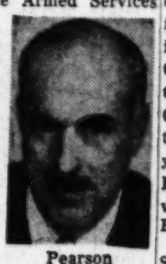
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Tydings' Part in Plane Debate

By Drew Pearson

Several hints have leaked to the public about a mysterious, dramatic debate over the B-36 inside the Senate Armed Services Committee. This column is now able to report the full details of this meeting. It is even more dramatic than rumored, though the B-36 did not occupy the center of the stage.



Pearson

What happened was that Chairman Tydings proposed that his Armed Services Committee select a group of impartial civilians to evaluate our entire air program, especially as to whether we were developing the right type of plane.

The astute Senator from Maryland argued that the military services should not be allowed to sit in judgment on themselves.

Tydings did not say so, but the Glenn Martin Co. of Baltimore, biggest airplane manufacturer in his State, together with Fairchild, which manufactures in Hagerstown, Md., have obtained dwindling orders since the war. Martin, which makes Navy planes, has felt particularly out in the cold.

Tydings had prepared a searching list of questions to be asked by the proposed review board. And some Senators felt these questions bordered on secret information—such as design, performance of war planes, targets to be hit, etc.

Verbal 4th of July

Tydings also proposed that the findings of the review committee be made public, and it was this aspect of disclosing strength and strategy which made other members of the Army Services Committee boil. As a result, the meeting ended in a verbal 4th of July.

Senator Lyndon Johnson of Texas suggested that if airplanes were to be evaluated, the Senate committee should do the same thing for tanks, ships, airplane carriers and all other branches of the service.

This idea didn't click with the gentleman from Maryland, and the debate got hotter. At one point, gentle Lyndon Johnson challenged:

"Well, the chairman is really trying to serve the committee," shot back Tydings.

Tydings Fumes

Finally, the committee agreed to Gurney's motion that Secretary of Defense Johnson be called before the committee, at which point Tydings blew up. He shouted that he wouldn't permit it.

"The committee has voted on this," remonstrated Johnson of Texas, "and the chairman has got to do it."

Tydings retorted that he didn't propose to do anything of the kind.

"You aren't the whole committee," bristled Johnson. "You're just the chairman."

"Well, they're my questions," snapped Tydings, referring to the list of questions on strategy and air strength he proposed to ask the board of review, "and you're not going to have them."

Whereupon he adjourned the meeting.

Despite Tydings' objection the committee did call Secretary Louie Johnson to an executive session. But Johnson begged off from expressing an opinion on Tydings' proposed air-strength questions. He said he would have to take them up with the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Lady and the Tiger

Senator Paul Douglas (D. Ill.) says the victory of young Franklin D. Roosevelt over the Tammany Tiger requires revision of the old limerick about the lady who rode on a tiger, only to be devoured. In that verse:

"They returned from the ride
And a smile on the face of the tiger."

But Senator Douglas now proposes a new version:

"There was a young lady from Niger
Who rode on a Tammany Tiger.
They returned from the ride
With the Tiger's skinned hide
Draped over the lady from Niger."

The Diplomatic Pouch

The new American Ambassador to Uruguay will be Christian M. Ravndal . . . President Truman will soon name Assistant Secretary of State Ernest Gross deputy United States Ambassador to the United Nations—a good man . . . Former Prime Minister Taufig Suwaidi of Iraq is in Washington trying to wangle 80 million bucks from the World Bank. He doesn't know it yet, but the bank plans to turn him down on the grounds that Iraq is a poor financial risk and—is too close to Russia.

Capital Capsules

More Asiatic Communism—The French government is preparing to rush more troops and planes into French Indo-China. Foreign Minister Schuman reported this to Secretary Acheson during an interlude of the Big Four meeting, explaining that the French Cabinet has ironclad evidence the Chinese Communists are planning to move troops into Indo-China to help the Communists who have been battling the French there for three years. Acheson has okayed the French scheme even though it will weaken the defenses of western Europe at a critical time.

Chinese Corruption—Dr. Hu Shih, former Chinese Ambassador to Washington, and thus personal envoy of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, recently told newsmen that Chiang's regime was "decadent and corrupt." . . . The frank and disarming former ambassador, who is a Cornell graduate, said the Kuomingtang had begun as a revolutionary movement, but grew undemocratic, then corrupt, as all dictatorships are destined to do . . . Having just come from north China, now in Communist hands, Hu Shih said: "This is no bamboo curtain; it is a real iron curtain, where personal freedoms are completely lost."

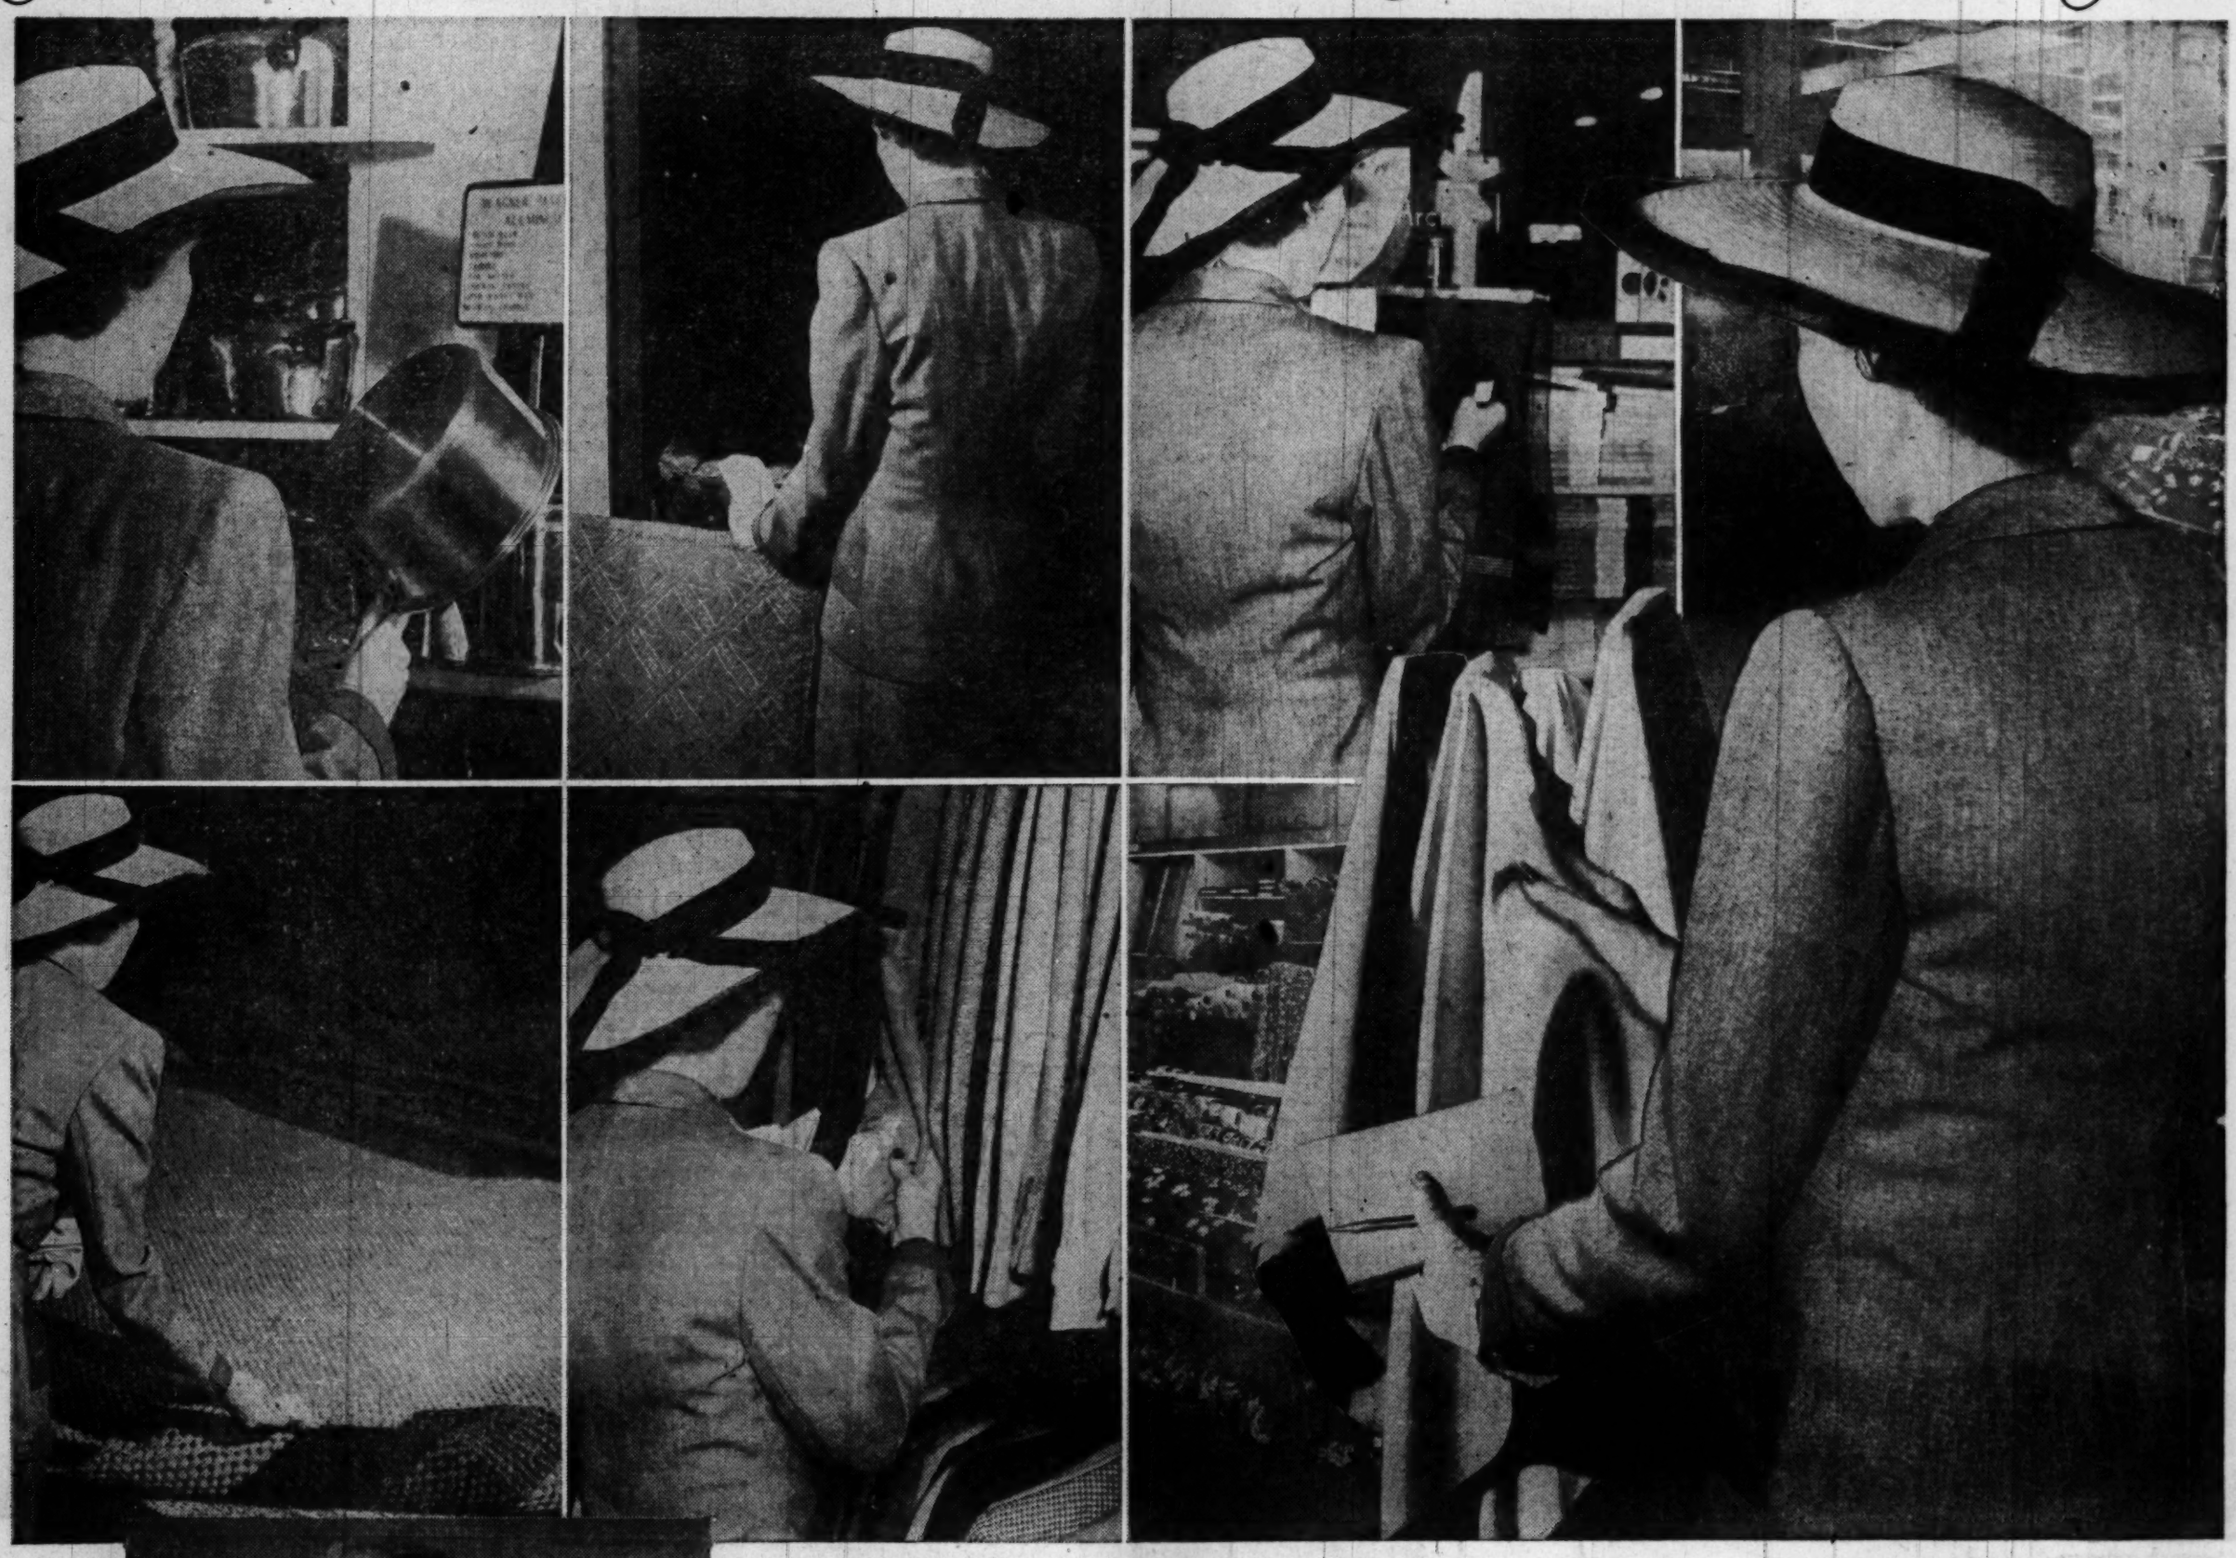
Number 18 in a Series... Hecht Co. Personalities in the News



MRS. ELIZABETH TAGART, Chief of our Comparison Shopping Department, has a well trained nose for news. She was a reporter and later Society Editor for The Washington Post. She did comparison shopping for several New York and San Francisco department stores. Traveled all over the world with her husband who was a Liaison Officer in the British Army. She likes newspaper work and believes that digging up news about what our customers want is a carry-over of the same field. If perchance you see a red-headed woman with pad and pencil listening in on your conversation with a salesperson . . . remember, she's not being nosey . . . she has your interests at heart.

Who Is Mrs. X??

ASKS ELIZABETH TAGART, CHIEF OF THE HECHT CO.'S COMPARISON SHOPPING DEPARTMENT

Who is Mrs. X? A housewife looking for a new kitchen utensil? Yes. A bargain hunter who has spotted an extraordinary fabric value? Definitely. An admirer and lover of fine wearing apparel? Most assuredly. All these shopping attributes should make Mrs. X one of The Hecht Co.'s best customers . . . but as a matter of fact, Mrs. X is one of The Hecht Co.'s severest critics. She's one of our five comparison shoppers whose job it is to scout the store from a customer's point of view. The Comparison Shopping Department, under the supervision and direction of Mrs. Tagart, is The Hecht Co.'s way of assuring you, the public, of receiving your biggest dollars worth. Her shoppers check prices, quantity and quality of all advertised merchandise. What's more, they make certain that all goods are described accurately and truthfully so that you, the buying public, can rely on our advertising. The hawkshawing activities of our comparison shoppers very often take them to the other good stores in this town to determine whether or not Hecht Co. prices, quality and selection compare favorably with theirs.

"Professional shopping is an art," says Mrs. Tagart. "It requires a vast knowledge of manufacturers . . . fabrics . . . workmanship and all the pertinent characteristics of hundreds of thousands of items." Each of our shoppers purchases an average of 30 items a day. But, just buying or examining merchandise isn't their only job. Our shoppers are always on the alert to pick up customer's candid comments . . . engage customers in conversation in an effort to determine the likes and dislikes of the buying public. Because our shoppers represent you, the hundreds of thousands of Hecht Co. customers, their word is law to us. The management knows that your confidence and satisfaction are tantamount to a successful business. "Who is Mrs. X? She's the eyes and ears of a big store," says Mrs. Tagart. "She's one of our family of 3500 associates who help make The Hecht Co. a great place to work . . . a great place to shop."
